RATIONS OR BREAKDOWN, JEFFERS SAYS

Warns Transportation System In U. S. Will Collapse Without Gas Limit.

FDR BACKS PROGRAM

Asserts Rationing Must Start Dec. 1 as War Necessity; Rubber Supply Cited.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Rubber Director William M. Jeffers warned today that nationwide gasoline rationing to conserve rubber is the only program which will avert a complete breakdown of transportation in this country.

There is no way around that conclusion, the outspoken ex-railroad president declared as he opened testimony of the big four on rubber and gas before the Truman committee of the senate. Also called before the committee were Price Administrator Leon Henderson, Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes and Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman.

Their appearance followed a declaration by President Roosevelt that nationwide gas rationing must be instituted Dec. 1 as a military necessity.

The president recalled that the Baruch report urged immediate action to conserve rubber lest the nation face a military and civilian collapse. And he added:

Since then the situation has become more acute, not less. Since then our military requirements for rubber have become greater, not smaller. Since then many tons of precious rubber have been lost through driving not essential to the war effort.

We must keep every pound we can on our wheels to maintain our wartime transportation system.

Jeffers told the Truman committee he has already directed ODT Director Eastman and Price Administrator Henderson to effect some changes in rationing for farmers and war plant workers. But he emphasized:

I deem it extremely unwise to delay the application of the only known remedy for the rubber shortage because some details will have to be changed from time to time.

Now, gentlemen, I came to Washington at the request of the

Mansfield Called on to Go 'All Out' In War Bond Buying Dec. 7—First Anniversary of Pearl Harbor

Spurred on by a slogan as inspiring as any possibly could be, Mansfield will stage its biggest one-day war bond-buying activity on Dec. 7—first anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

From the exact hour the first Japanese bomb descended on American territory—12:25 p. m. Mansfield time—through the rest of the day Mansfielders will be asked to make their dollars talk—just as America's armed forces are "talking" to the Axis.

The slogan is "Remember Pearl Harbor—Buy Bonds," and the goal for the day is $100,000.

It isn't solely a Mansfield activity—Pearl Harbor day has been designated specifically by state and United States treasury officials as a day worthy of special activity in war bond buying.

In Mansfield the "Pearl Harbor day" program has been set up by the Junior Association of Commerce and numerous civic, fraternal and labor organization.

To speed the sale of bonds—and to make their purchase easier—Mansfield banks and loan companies will close their doors at 12 noon, reopening them at 12:25, to transact no other business than the sale of war bonds.

To make sure that no one forgets to "Remember Pearl Harbor — Buy Bonds" there will be an air raid alert at 12:25 p. m. Monday and Civil Air Patrol planes of the Mansfield unit will zoom over the city dropping a barrage of leaflets reading "As soon as the 'all clear' sounds buy a bond and be

Germans Admit Resistance In Key Navy Base

Street Fighting Reported as Italians Help Seize Port to Prevent Vichy Ships From Putting to Sea To Join Allied Forces.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—Reuters reported a Vichy broadcast today saying that all French warships in Toulon had been sunk.

(By United Press)

LONDON — German forces today seized the French fleet at Toulon after a battle with the French in which part of the fleet was scuttled.

How much of the fleet was sent to the bottom by Frenchmen who preferred to sink their ships rather than allow them to fall into Nazi hands was not immediately revealed.

All early reports of the Nazi action came from German radio sources. There was no independent report of the Nazi coup and the ensuing battle in the streets of Toulon.

However, the Nazi high command admitted that "part of the French fleet scuttled itself despite the orders of the French government."

The communique repeated that "resistance at isolated places" was encountered by the German troops when they started their march into the naval base last night.

The German communique attributed the resistance to "Anglo-Saxon influence."

However, it insisted that the efforts of the French to resist were "nipped in the bud" and that the occupation was carried out in a few hours.

"The town and harbor of Toulon have been firmly in the hands of our troops since early this morning," the Nazi high command said.

Italian troops as well as Germans marched into the French naval base city, the communique said, asserting that the taking over of the fleet had been agreed upon by both Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

The Germans said they acted to prevent the French warships from steaming out to sea.

The Germans said that French commanders had completed plans to take their ships into the Mediterranean to join the Allies. The occupation of Toulon was designed to thwart this plan which was attributed to Allied influence and sympathizers of Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

The French fleet now is being demobilized, the Nazi high command said.

The demobilization of unstable

STUDYING PLAN TO RATION U. S. SPENDING MONEY

Treasury Officials Also Weigh Drastic Forced Savings Program.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Planners of the treasury department and the office of economic stabilization today are studying drastic forced savings programs and an alternative plan to ration spending money.

Those officials under Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes estimate that there will be an annual surplus of $25,000,000,000 in purchasing power even after the American people pay their present taxes.

The economists who are seeking measures to curb inflation believe that a large part of that surplus must be absorbed if price, wage and rationing controls are to function.

The proposals to ration the spending money of 130,000,000 Americans just as most consumer goods will be rationed appeals to the administration economic planners but it would involve tremendous—if not insurmountable — administrative problems.

One of the plans being studied would ration spending money like this:

Each wage and salary earner or investment coupon clipper would receive a certain amount of free ration coupons with his periodic wage, salary or investment income. Those coupons, say in a total amount of $1,500 a year, would permit him to buy the bare necessities of life tax free.

But after an individual ex-

Pictured above is a CCC truck after it crashed into a tree and overturned after being crowded off U. S. Route 42 a mile south of Mansfield at 3:15 a. m. today by a south bound car whose driver, state patrolmen said, failed to stop. Although considerable damage was done to the truck and its load, F. G. Moore, the driver, was not injured. It was the only major accident in Richland county over the holiday period.

REGISTER M AND Q GROUP TODAY

Gasoline Registrars Continue Application Work: R-S Class Report Tomorrow.

Registration of applicants for supplemental gasoline rations was resumed at John Simpson Junior high school gymnasium this afternoon, today's name group including, inclusively, the M through Q listing. Hours were 1 to 5 and 6 to 9 p. m.

Saturday's registration of the R-S group will be from 12 noon to 5 p. m. with no evening sessions. Monday's final registration of the T-Z group will be from 1 to 5 and 6 to 9.

Members of the Richland county rationing board's gasoline panel yesterday caught up with virtually all challenged applications for the B or C supplemental books.

Panel members urged motorists to endorse their gas coupons according to the write-in regulations which require that passenger car operators note the car's license number and state of registration on the back of each coupon. This will protect against misuse in case of loss and will facil

FDR Announces He Soon Will Name Byrnes' Successor.

WASHINGTON (P)—President Roosevelt's announcement that he planned to fill a supreme court vacancy soon raised speculation today that he might turn to congress for a successor to James F. Byrnes, who resigned his associate justiceship to become economic director.

The two leading congressional candidates for the place were believed to be Senate Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky and Senator Brown (D., Mich.) who sponsored the economic stabilization bill and who was defeated for re-election by Judge Homer Ferguson, Detroit Republican.

60 LEAVE FOR ARMY CENTER

Mansfield Reservists Depart In 2 Buses: Get Orders on High School Boys.

Approximately 60 Mansfield reservists who were permitted to spend Thanksgiving at their homes reported for army duty today at the Fort Hayes reception center in Columbus, leaving Mansfield at 8:30 a. m. in two buses.

Despite the coldest weather of the season several hundred relatives and friends of the new soldiers were at Park avenue west and Walnut street to see them leave. The men were from Boards 1 and 2 districts.

The CIO Local 711 band played on the street and the reservists received sewing kits, prayer books and Testaments during a brief program in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

Accompanying the reservists to Columbus were 21 colored registrants from Boards 1 and 2 who will take their final physical examinations today. If accepted by the army they will return home

STIMSON WELL PLEASED WITH WAR'S ASPECT

Declares Operations Progress Favorably For Allies on All Battlefronts.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson today stated that operations on battlefronts of the world are progressing favorably for the Allied armies.

"Operations on all fronts appear to be progressing favorably," the secretary said at a press conference.

Stimson appeared very optimistic over present conditions on the far flung fronts.

Operations have necessarily slowed down in North Africa, the secretary said, and strong resistance is expected from the German army when the assault is resumed.

"A stiff fight will result," Stimson declared. He added that the Germans have approximately 12,000 to 15,000 troops in eastern Tunisia.

Ground fighting has been confined to heavy skirmishes thus far, he said.

In New Guinea Stimson said that American and Australian troops have cornered the Japanese in a pocket near Buna.

The feat of U. S. and Australian troops in fighting their way through jungles in New Guinea is one of the outstanding accomplishments of the war, he said.

The situation in the Solomons at present is favorable, he said. However, he warned the Japs may strike again.

Operations in the Aleutians have been limited by weather conditions, he explained. Nevertheless, he added, American fliers are taking every opportunity to strike at the Japanese in that area.

DOWN TO 19

Mercury Drop Blows in Snow: Lower Reading Forecast.

A biting northwest wind swirled snow in Mansfield's face today as the mercury went down to 19 degrees in the second cold wave of the month.

There was no indication of a let up either, as the weatherman predicted continued cold and snow flurries tonight. The temperature was expected to drop lower by tomorrow morning. The reading at noon today was 20 above.

Today's light snow was the first to remain on the ground although Mansfield has had snow on two or three other occasions this fall. Despite the cold, the average reading for the past 24 hours was only one degree below the normal 34.

PINCH: Axis Squeezed on Two Fronts; Reds Advance In North

(By Associated Press)

The jaws of Allied traps squeezed tighter around the Axis on two great battlefronts today—Stalingrad and Tunisia—while the arm of a big new Soviet offensive from Moscow reached out to a point only 100 miles from the Latvian frontier.

A Berlin broadcast acknowledged that massive Russian tank forces had achieved "a fairly deep penetration" of German defense lines northeast of Moscow, with the Russians striking simultaneously in the Velikie Luki region, 265 miles west of Moscow, and near the big Nazi base at Rzhev, which is 125 miles northwest of Moscow.

In Libya the victorious British Eighth army prepared to assault Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's defenses at El Agheila. British headquarters said tersely there was "nothing to report from our land forces" in the westward drive. An Italian communique asserted that thrusts of strong enemy exploring elements in Libya were repulsed.

On the Tunisian front spearheads of Lieut. Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson's Anglo-American expeditionary force were reported to have advanced within 15 miles of Tunis, the Axis-held capital, and battled Axis troops at Mateur, 25 miles south of Bizerte.

Still another Allied column was officially credited with routing the Germans from Mejez El Bab, 30

DOGFIGHTS: U. S., Jap Fliers Clash Over Buna Battlefield

(By International News Service)

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA —Bitter aerial dogfights raged over southeast New Guinea today as the Allies unleashed heavy blows to crush Japanese troops in the Gona-Buna area and the enemy strove desperately to retain its hold on the coastal base.

Reports to Allied headquarters in Australia said that American and Australian airmen and Jap pilots are constantly in action over the narrow coastal strip, exchanging fire in mid-air, mercilessly strafing opposing ground troops.

The air battles became more pronounced as the Allied drive to push the Japs into the sea was slowed when the Americans and Australians came face to face with formidable Jap defenses, including concrete pillboxes and barbed wire entanglements.

An Allied headquarters communique revealed that despite numerous sinkings of enemy warships and transports off the New Guinea coast the Japs had succeeded in landing marine reinforcements.

The physical condition of the fresh enemy marines was described in reports to headquarters as "excellent."

The reinforcements are believed to have come from the big Jap naval station at Yokosuka. Markings on the clothing of marines blasted from trees and out of fox holes by American jungle fighters bore insignia of the Yokosuka base.

Intensity of ground fighting in the Buna-Gona area has some-

Hospital First To Inaugurate 'Meatless Days'

As the first institution in Mansfield or Richland county to begin voluntary meat rationing, Mansfield General hospital has set aside every Tuesday as a meatless day, Miss Mable Selfe, director of nurses, said today.

The plan, started this week, will apply to patients, nurses, and all other personnel, Miss Selfe explained.

However, any patient on a therapeutic diet will be allowed whatever daily diet the physician orders.

Except for Cleveland hospitals no other hospitals in the northeastern area are following this plan, Miss Selfe stated. She said Tuesday was chosen as the vegetable and fruit day here in order to have variety in the menus since fish is often served on Friday.

Vandals Cut Upholstery at Three Theaters.

Police today were seeking a band of vandals who Wednesday night slashed upholstery of 12 seats in the Madison theater and suspected of being the same gang which has wrought similar damage at the Ritz and Majestic theaters.

Harold Olds, manager of the Madison, told police that sharp knives or razor blades had been used to cut the heavy cloth, the damage totaling $40 or more.

Managers at the Ritz and Majestic told Police Lieutenant Eugene Hartnett they had been having trouble with a group of colored boys.

City, Nation Keep Wheels of Industry Turning on Holiday

Mansfield along with the rest of the nation plunged into the job of making hash of the Axis as well as of the turkey today after keeping the implements of war moving off assembly lines on the country's wartime Thanksgiving day.

Except for a brief interlude of religious observance and the traditional Thanksgiving dinner, that was as plentiful as ever although more costly, yesterday for Mansfielders was like many another day for most Americans who kept the factories humming.

Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company workers were on the job in full force while all other local plants engaged in turning out war orders maintained production in all departments having to do with war equipment. Westinghouse and the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company were among factories in partial operation.

While hundreds of Mansfield families kept the home fires burning this year in order to conserve rubber and gasoline, the spirit of the American Thanksgiving wandered farther from its native land than ever before, spreading overseas to America's men who are fighting in the far corners of the earth.

In England, where London newspapers explained the significance of the holiday, thousands of British homes were opened to American soldiers. Roast pork instead of turkey was the main dish at overseas bases.

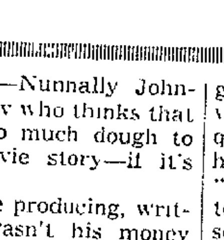
HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Nunnally Johnson is a fellow who thinks that $300,000 isn't too much dough to spend for a movie story—if it's the right story.



Coons

Nunnally is the producing, writing fellow. It wasn't his money that went for "The Moon Is Down," and he wasn't in on the bidding, but it's up to him to make a movie that will get the price back and more.

He knows there was considerable merriment around town when, after this all-time high price was paid, the stage version of John Steinbeck's book died shortly after its first breath.

"We've had two offers for it from other studios—one for the price we paid, the other for $315,000," he says. "And we're not taking it.

"It's not too much to pay for a good, solid, and noble idea—and this one is noble because it dramatizes the determination of a free people to regain their freedom. I'd rather pay $300,000 for that than less for a gimcrack. This is worth it, and what's more, it'll be worth it at the box-office.

Johnson in his script has "tampered" with the Steinbeck original, as the author himself suggested. He has taken it from a vague setting and made the conquerors definitely Nazis, and he has shifted the emphasis from "what happens to the German's" to show "those tough Norwegians scaring the daylights out of the Nazis."

They had quite a time with Colonel Lanser, the Nazi commander of the piece. Some readers and playgoers decided that Steinbeck was making him entirely too reasonable and philosophical a fellow to be a satisfactory villain. Others—including Johnson — decided Lanser was no less villainous because of his sayings, and gave the accolade entirely to the Norwegians and their resistance. Johnson took no chances on Lanser, however. He has "heavied him up" a bit, and Sir Cedric Hardwicke, who will play the role, has instructions to consider himself a heel for the film's duration."

"As for the cost," says the producer, "I know that if it's a good picture, people will pay for it. If it's dull, no matter if it's on the side of the angels, they won't—they can sit home and sympathize."

"The Moon Is Down" will be different in one respect, at least, from all other anti-Nazi films. It won't have a single "Heil, Hitler!" in it.

"I just happened to think, I forgot all about it," says Nunnally Johnson, "and I think I'll just let it stay that way."

BOY, 7, SHOOTS SISTER BECAUSE SHE 'TATTLED'

Toledo Killing One of Four That Marred Thanksgiving Day in Ohio.

TOLEDO —(AP)— Seven-year-old Charles Ibbotson, who sheriff's deputies said shot and killed his sister Rita, 10, after she tattled on him, was held for juvenile authorities today.

Deputies William Farley and Edward Stipes reported that Charles' brothers and sisters gave them this account of the Thanksgiving day shooting in the family's shack-home near here.

Charles was "mad at Rita" because she had informed her father of a wrongdoing by her brother. A few minutes after their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ibbotson, left home to drive into Toledo, Charles pointed his father's .22 caliber rifle at his sister's head, said "Goodbye Rita" and pulled the trigger.

The deputies, called to the scene by a neighbor, took Charles and three other Ibbotson children, Lois, 11; Kenneth, 5; and John, 4, to the Child Study institute and removed a 14-month-old girl to a hospital. They said the shack was in disorder and had no heat. Deputies said the children's father sold junk for a living.

Three others persons were killed in Thanksgiving day shooting incidents in Ohio.

Daniel T. Hall, 56, was killed by two bullets fired through windows on opposite sides of his farm home near West Alexandria, Sheriff Malcolm Clear said.

The first charge went through a bedroom window and an open door, striking a hall as he sat in a living room chair. He sent two of his nine children to a neighbor's home for help and as they left a second bullet was fired through the living room window, wounding him fatally.

William C Conkle, 42, a Pennsylvania railroad engineer, was slain by two boys who then looted his pockets, Columbus police reported. Detective Chief Leo L. Phillips said robbery obviously was the motive.

Conkle, a native of Danville, had worked for the Pennsylvania for 23 years.

A hunting accident near Bellaire claimed the life of Howard Civin, 16. He stepped in front of his father's gun as the latter fired.

State Treasurer Don H. Ebright's report showed that the Richland county collections so far this year are $153,959 below the 1941 figure for the same period. Receipts now total $170,751. At this time last year $624,710 had been collected.

The state-wide decline for the week of Nov. 8-14 was $233,996. With only five weeks remaining in 1942, Ohio sales tax receipts are $6,074,000 below the corresponding period last year.

'BULLY BEEF EXPRESS' BRAVES JAPS TO DELIVER ITEMS OF WAR

By MURLIN SPENCER

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA — (Delayed) — (AP)—The Americans call it "the bully beef express."

But there's a note of respect when they use that name for, of all the fliers who ride the skies over embattled New Guinea the pilots of "the bully beef express" are among the most daring, the most skillful and the hardest working.

Unarmed, except for the .45-caliber automatics which the pilots carry, and virtually cold meat for any enemy plane, these Douglas and Lockheed army transports sweep in and out over enemy territory to land within a few miles of the Japanese lines to deliver their cargoes and pull away again.

I have seen them fly directly over a Japanese anti-aircraft gun position so low that the Japanese could not fire their anti-aircraft batteries but did blaze away with machine-guns.

Unshaven pilots will stand beside the planes when they have landed and bellow for men to hurry and unload them so they can get going before some zero should happen by.

They carry soldiers, natives ammunition and what-not. They land in fields even the early-day barnstormers would have shunned.

The pilots are all members of the army transport service. American troops now fighting the battle of Buna owe a great deal to them for they've delivered them ammunition for their guns and food for their stomachs.

Who are these pilots of "the They're men like Lieut. J. M. bully beef express?" Rodgers of Birmingham, Ala., and Lieut. W. D. Wells of Ovid, N. Y., and not long ago a high school coach at Jeffersonville, Ohio.

There are also men like Master Sergeant Michael Kulich of Harrisburg, Pa., who help keep the planes going.

UP and DOWN THE STREET

Three South Diamond street children, two to seven years old, had a drowsy Thanksgiving, at least, according to a police report. A housewife called the police station about 3 a. m. yesterday, reporting that two little boys had come crying to her door a few minutes before. Patrolmen William Colby and John Grohol learned through the sobs of the older boy, only seven, that their parents had left their nearby home at 2:30 a. m. leaving them alone with their baby brother. The patrolmen then aroused Mrs. Marie L. Menehan, humane officer of the Richland county Humane society, who went to the boys' home to mother them until the parents returned.

An eye for business and a love for the movies caused three little boys to temporarily fall from good graces the other day. The trio helped themselves to a truck-load of turnips that James Dickson frequently gives to Friendly House for the people in the settlement district and then sold their wares wherever they could. When called upon the carpet they admitted their deeds but one of them, before being aware that a reprimand was forthcoming, admitted that he sold his share of the turnips to his grandmother, received 45 cents for them, and was anxious to know when the Settlement would receive another load of turnips.

The little chap with a bow and arrow took a beating this month, despite the Thanksgiving holiday, according to the records of the Richland county marriage license bureau. Only 26 licenses were applied for and issued so far this month against the 38 issued for the corresponding period last year. Forty licenses were issued for the entire month of November in 1941. The lack of business at the bureau is attributed by clerks to the fact that so many of the county's single men are serving with the armed forces and are unable to get home for wedding bells and rice.

POLICE WAGE 2-HOUR FIGHT TO QUELL ROW

Civilian, Infantryman Slain, 12 Wounded in Disturbance at Phoenix, Ariz.

(By International News Service)

PHOENIX, Ariz.—Two persons were killed and at least 12 others were wounded when Negro soldiers rioted in the colored district of Phoenix early today.

Military and civilian police and sheriff's deputies waged a two-hour gun battle with the rioting soldiers before order was restored, Sheriff Lon Jordan reported.

Killed were a Negro soldier and a civilian. The wounded, including both soldiers and civilians, were rushed to hospitals for emergency treatment.

The civilian victim was identified as Robert Riley, 44, Negro, who was found shot to death at the wheel of his automobile. Identity of the soldier slain in the battle was not immediately available.

The sheriff said the disorders broke out at 10 o'clock (MWT) last night when Negro infantrymen from an army camp just inside the city limits quarreled among themselves and resorted to gunfire.

Squad cars of police and sheriff's deputies were dispatched to the scene and managed to quell the disturbance. Several Negro soldiers were wounded and a number of rioters were jailed, the sheriff reported.

Two hours later, the sheriff said, the Negro soldiers returned and opened fire on military and civilian police left to guard the district.

The sheriff said the soldiers apparently had obtained "re-inforcements" at the negro army camp.

In the renewal of the gun battle in the streets, a soldier and a civilian were killed and "quite a few" others were wounded.

With the appearance of additional military police and sheriff's deputies, the rioters dispersed, the sheriff said.

Military authorities placed a heavy guard over the district. There was no immediate statement from army officials.

Labor Department Official Opposes Registering Women

WASHINGTON—(INS)— Opposition to immediate nationwide registration of women, either voluntary or compulsory, was expressed today by Mary Anderson, head of the labor department's women's division.

Miss Anderson said that even without such registration women will take over more than half the jobs in this country, and added:

"To register women before it becomes absolutely necessary would be crying 'wolf'. Premature registration would dissipate a lot of time as well as money and also create unrest among women who would be terribly disappointed if a job did not materialize at once."

For the present, Miss Anderson advocated voluntary registration in certain localities where labor shortages occur.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

TWO FORCING PASSES

THERE ARE two extremely contrasting kinds of forcing passes. In the case of each, the pass by one partner practically compels the other to take action in the form of either a bid or a double. But there the resemblance ends. One kind of forcing pass indicates to your partner that you think the opponents' contract can be set and you want him to decide whether your side can more profitably try a higher contract. The other indicates you are not sure whether it can be beaten and want him to decide between playing against it and sacrificing.

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♥	2 ♦	2 ♠
3 ♦	4 ♥	Pass	Pass
5 ♦	Pass	Pass	Dbl

There we have both kinds of forcing pass on the same deal. South showed, by his pass of 4-Hearts, that he had pretty fair defensive values even against the terrific distribution shown by East's jump bid to game. If he had possessed weak defense he should have sacrificed at once over the vulnerable game, with his own side not vulnerable, since he knew about his partner's fit. However, his failure to double indicated he was not unduly strong on the defense, and put it up to North.

With only one apparent trick-taker against the hearts — and that in his side's own long suit of diamonds — he reckoned that 4-Hearts could be made, so properly sacrificed.

West's duty was very clear after East passed the 5-Diamonds. All players at the table knew that bid was a sacrifice, virtually certain to be beaten, so West had to decide whether to double it or try for 5-Hearts. With better distribution and worse honor strength, he should have made the bid. But with his hand as it was, all he could do was double, not on his own values but mainly on what East had shown.

Everybody bid right, as 4-Hearts could have been made and 5-Diamonds got set two.

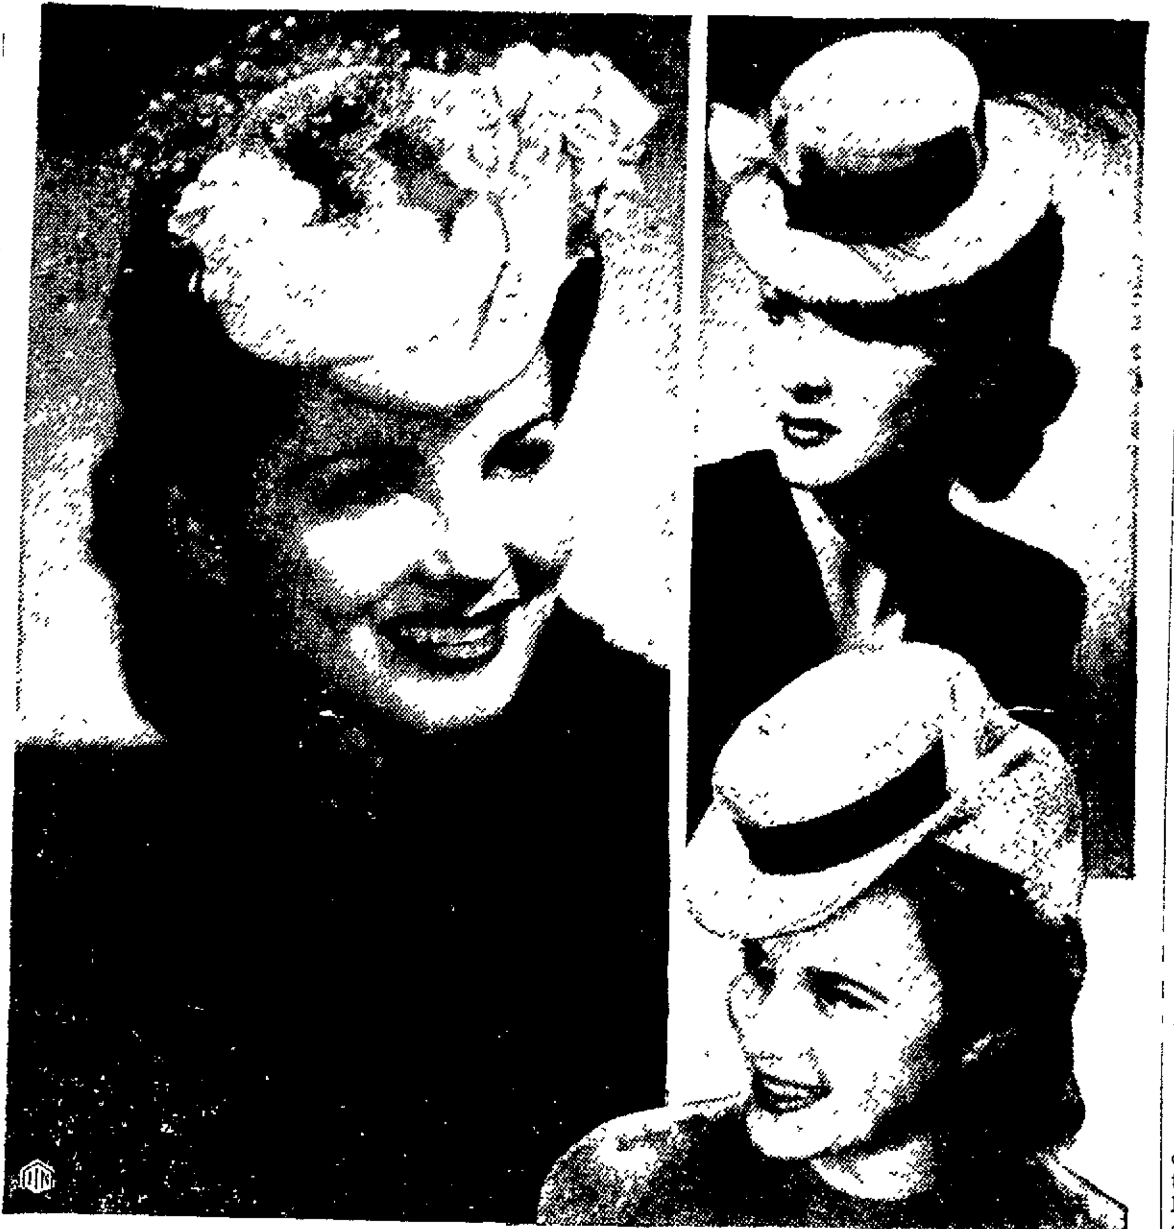
White Hats Are Alluring and Safe



Left, white toque of hatter's plus trimmed with white roses; top right, white feather sailor; below, white tricot wool sailor shot with gold, with snood.

By SUSAN BARDEN
(International Illustrated News Writer)

GAY WHITE HATS are very much news this year for winter and holiday wear. They have always been flattering favorites for spring and summer, but now for both allure and safety they have come into their own as cold weather headgear as well.

These frosty chapeaux are a new slant on the old tradition of festive hats for Yuletide — a new way to make dreams of a white Christmas come true no matter where you are.

And they are safety and beauty measures combined. As everyone knows there is nothing more flattering than white as a foil for radiant eyes and complexion. It's especially alluring when it frames your face in a becoming hat. Glistening like sun or snow against the dimmest lights, it will make its wearer a bright spot in a blackout, and thus avoid traffic accidents or being bumped by a pedestrian on a dark sidewalk.

Gives New Style Touch

Another point in favor of this fashion is that it will give your old outfits a brand new style touch that will make them look like a different costume, and they also make a perfect setting for your furs.

Like all the new hats, the white ones come in styles that enhance girls from 17 to 70. Swan white feather fantasies are especially made for your frou-frou costumes and saucy toques for sleek heads. Calots are worn well back to reveal waves and curls. They are all mid-season demands for a gala holiday.

The three hats in the above photographs show the wide use of white for wear with dressy or daytime costumes.

Feather Sailor

The dressy sailor is made of fine soft white feathers with a band of black satin and a charming little butterfly at the front. A black veil falls from the back of the band and covers the hair.

The white toque made of shiny hatter's plush trimmed with white roses. A brown jersey bandeau matches the brown veil which is covered with small white dots. This model is worn down over the forehead.

The other sailor has an interesting back treament which is almost in the nature of a draped scarf or snood. It is made of white tricot wool shot with gold to give extra elegance and sparkle. It has a dark brown band around the brief crown.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

GEORGES looked at me intently.

"Am I keeping him waiting?" he asked. "If so, I will go to him at once, although I wanted to tell my story first to you."

"And so you shall," I assured him. "No, you are not keeping him. He has many things to do and wants you to take all the time you need talking to me."

I did not tell him that my father seated close to the other side of a camouflaged door was listening to every word we said.

"I am glad," he said, "for there are many things I want to tell you and ask you. First, did Olina or Mary recognize me in the cafe, as you must have done?"

"I did not recognize you at once," I answered, "and neither of the girls had any idea then of your identity. I do not know that Mary has given the matter any thought, but while Olina has said nothing to me, I have an intuition that she would not be surprised to know that you were the apparently old man she saw in the cafe."

Ready for the Story.

"Poor child!" he said irrelevantly, then "I hope I shan't tire you with my story."

"Don't be silly!" I said. "Make your story as long as you wish. I told you to come here so that I could hear it."

"It begins with the revolution in Trees," he said, "when the totalitarians seized the government. You see, they especially hated me, because I always have been on the side of the oppressed peasants in our country, who really love me. The totalitarian leaders were determined that I should live to lead the peasants out of their bondage, for which I had resolved to give up my throne. I never wanted to be a king anyway."

There was something boyish, almost mirthful, in his voice and my heart warmed to the reckless chivalrous youth.

How Georges Escaped.

"They nearly did for me," he went on. "They hauled me out of the palace, almost literally by the neck. Why they did not kill me then I have no idea. Perhaps they were saving me to use as a bargaining point in dealing with some faction in the government.

"They kept me prisoner in a lonely house near the coast, and no one else knew what had become of me."

"All the world was wondering about you," I said, "and finally decided you must have been killed."

"I was saved," he explained, "only because one of my guards had once been a gamekeeper in the palace park. I had often befriended him and once saved his life. He gave no sign that he recognized me, and treated me with unusual harshness, although he was plotting my escape. When the time was ripe, he engineered my getaway on a fishing boat.

Worries About Rescuer.

"He was sure that he would not be suspected, but I have worried about him ever since. He would have aided me in repayment for what I had done for him, even if he knew he would meet his death, as I fear he did."

"But you do not know that, Georges," I said, "so why brood over it?"

"You are right, of course," he said, "and I'll try not to think of it any more. But Henri's face comes often before me, in my waking hours and in my dreams."

"I know, dear boy," I told him, "but you can do him no good by dwelling upon such memories. Tell me instead of your escape in the fishing boat. It must have been thrilling," I added, hoping to turn his mind from thoughts of his faithful Henri.

G. O. P. Women Of Ohio to Meet In Columbus Soon

Republican women of Ohio will meet in Columbus on Thursday, Dec. 10, at the club house of the Ohio Society for Political Education.

At that time the society will turn over to the State Federation of Republican Women, Inc., its beautiful club house at 42 Hamilton park and all furnishings. This gift is to be used as a headquarters for all Republican women of Ohio, to house the executive secretary of the federation, and maintain therein a suite of rooms for the use of the national committeewoman of the Republican party.

Two motives underly this gift. The Ohio Society for Political Education was responsible for the creation of the federation and the study programs which have so greatly helped Republican women. The national prominence Governor Bricker has attained also can best be furthered by the working of all Republican women together.

The society, in pursuance of its policy of working for the best interest of the Republican party, will dissolve and its members will be urged to associate themselves with some unit of the federation.

GEORGIA GIRL MARRIES BERT SKELLY NOV. 21

Vows Exchanged By Couple In Savannah's Oldest Church; Will Live In That City After Wedding Trip to Atlanta, Ga.

IN A QUIET CEREMONY in the Epworth Methodist church, the oldest in Savannah, Ga., Rev. Lawrence L. Cowen read the ceremony that united in marriage Miss Nelta Virginia Gabrels of that city and Bert C. Skelly, former Mansfielder, at 5 p. m. on Nov. 21.

Lawrence E. Gabrels, father of the bride, escorted her to the altar banked with bouquets of large white chrysanthemums and palms and gave her in marriage. She was attired in a powder blue, light weight wool street length dress. She wore a small ginger brown felt hat with a small veil. Other accessories were brown. Her corsage was of white roses. The maid of honor, best friend of the bride, wore a pastel yellow wool dress, cut on princess lines. She carried a sheaf of Talisman roses. Best man was Fred Norman of Illinois, friend of the bridegroom. Mrs. Oglesbee of Savannah furnished the nuptial music. She played "Oh Promise Me," "Because," "I Love You Truly" and the traditional "Wedding March."

A reception for 30 guests was held immediately after the ceremony at the bride's home. A buffet supper was served. Bouquets of white chrysanthemums were placed throughout the home. The bride wore a tan tweed suit with brown accessories and a corsage of gardenias when the couple left for Atlanta, Ga., on their wedding trip. Katie Warga is going to take a train ride tomorrow, and she's that thrilled about it. It'll be her first train ride.

Now Katie has been around and about to different places, but always by motor, having grown up in the generation that has been led to believe a railroad train is something you wait for at a crossing, and nothing more.

When Kay's Shoppe girls decided to go to the Central States women's bowling tournament at Toledo this weekend, and offered Katie the spot as sixth gal to round out singles and doubles competition, she jumped at the chance, so I'm told, just for the train ride.

Not a few Mansfield keglers were amused last spring when several members of the Mansfield high school bowling team got the biggest kick of their lives out of their first train ride.

The fact that, as national high school champions, they were going to the A. B. C. tournament at Columbus for a special exhibition match before the world's greatest bowlers, as guests of the American Bowling Congress, was strictly secondary.

The train ride was the thing.

Those kids could probably tell Katie now whether the train actually says: "Bromo seltzer, bromo seltzer, bromo seltzer," as it roars along the rails.

Speaking of bowling tournaments and A. B. C. and all the like of that, Mansfield keglers are reminded that the A. B. C. rules demand that they have a city tournament and decide city championships.

The tournament in both men's and women's divisions is set up to start Dec. 19, with entries in the men's tourney closing Dec. 13, and in the women's joust on Dec. 4.

And in spite of the war, there is every reason to expect the biggest and best tournament in the history of the Mansfield Bowling association.

A glance at the record of A. B. C. sanctioned membership eligible for the tournament will surprise Mansfield maple knockers.

Last year the Mansfield Bowling association had 18 sanctioned leagues with 168 teams. This year it has 17 leagues, but with 172 teams.

And here's the way women's bowling has been growing by leaps and bounds. Last year the Women's Bowling association had three sanctioned leagues with 26 teams eligible for the tournament. This year it has eight leagues with 68 teams.

Lucky strike dreams HAVEN'T gone to war.

That tournament officials last year hit upon a fair handicap system was proven by the fact that the high handicap Art Rattan team won the tournament, while Bissman Birdie Brands, rolling from scratch, came in second.

A Westinghouse team won the women's tournament.

Ben Hogan Takes Vardon Golf Cup

he is finished with competition for the duration, having joined a civilian flying school at Tulsa, Okla., Ben Hogan, top money winner and Vardon trophy holder for 1942, will not have his standing altered by future tournaments this year.

Finishing with 400 points in the Vardon trophy competition, and richer by $13,143, his victory was confirmed yesterday by Fred Corcoran, tournament manager for the Professional Golf association. In addition, he led in low scoring averages with 70.87 strokes through 64 rounds.

Byron Nelson took second place and Sam Snead, now in the navy, took third in the competition money-winnings, but neither were actually near the Texan. Hogan after being stopped in a streak of 56 money finishes, ran up 25 more, including victories in the $10,000 Los Angeles open, the North and South open, the Asheville open, the Hale America open and the Rochester open.

Bus Use Ruled Out For Cagers

Order Made Emphatic By Director Eastman.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Ohio's high school basketball seasons will be different for the duration. Neither players nor rollicking team-backers can use school or chartered buses to watch traditional contests in rival towns.

New and definite restrictions against "non-essential" use of buses made the change.

The office of defense transportation, trying to make equipment last until victory is won, has ordered that gasoline, tires and spare parts will be certified for school buses after Feb. 1, 1943, only upon submission of proof that conservation policies are being carried out.

Director Joseph B. Eastman was emphatic about restrictions on the use of school buses and suggested curtailment even of essential mileage.

"The use of school buses for school transportation during the emergency," he said, "shall be limited to the transportation of students, teachers and other school employes en route between their homes and places of regular daily instruction.

"School buses shall not be used for the transportation of any group to any special event . . . nor for the transportation of pupils to and from home for the noon lunch. School buses shall not be used for the personal transportation of the owner, operator or other persons."

Estimating there were 90,000 school buses, Eastman declared that "transportation shall be provided only for students, teachers or other school employes who have to walk more than two miles to school or more than a mile and a half to a school bus trunk route."

Exceptions may be made for persons within two miles residing along roads over which a bus must pass or for physically handicapped children.

The statement added:

School buses represent over 50 per cent of the nation's passenger buses. Their conservation and proper use during this emergency are of major importance and concern. New school buses can be procured only in the most urgent cases.

"Every school bus in the nation is required by general order ODT 21 to have after Nov. 30, 1942, a certificate of war necessity fixing the maximum number of miles of operation, and authorizing the necessary fuel, parts, tires and tubes for same.

"These certificates will be continuously reviewed and revised to meet the basic minimum transportation needs."

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK (AP) At the end of the first period of the Penn-Cornell game yesterday, the Penn boys had had something like 18 shots at the goal from 30 yards or less in three games and had scored just one touchdown. . . . From there on they couldn't be stopped at least not by Cornell. . . . Which explains why you seldom see a grid coach over 30 whose hair retains its natural color.

Capt "Mike" Moran, commander of the U. S. S. Boise, was a four-letter man at Annapolis before he became a six-Jap man in the Solomons. And he once won a trophy as the best all-around athlete aboard the U. S. S. Nevada. . . . Commander O. O. "Scrappy" Kessing, head of the North Carolina Navy Pre-Flight school, has received his sea orders. . . . Tommy Swanson, former Oregon State halfback, now a captain at Camp Roberts, Calif., described a lieutenant in his company as "one of the grandest fellows I've ever known, and a wonderful officer with troops." . . . A RANK INSULT.

About six months ago Corp. Dave Zinkoff acted as announcer at a wrestling show near the Louisiana camp where he was stationed. One of the burpers on the card was Ernie Dusek. . . . Last Friday Lieut. Dave Zinkoff, just out of the signal corps officers' school, took on a "guest announcing" job here. When he started to announce the main bout Ernie Dusek turned up again, looked at the newly-commissioned lieutenant, shook hands and grunted: "So you lost your stripes, eh, Zink?"

URGES COAL BOWL FOR ANCIENT ENEMIES

NEW ORLEANS —(AP)— Sports Editor Bill Keefe of the Times-Picayune proposes a "Coal Bowl" football game in Birmingham, matching Auburn and Alabama, state rivals.

The teams severed athletic relations in 1907 following a bitter 6-6 gridiron tie.

"Check the hatchets and match the teams the Saturday after their season closes," suggests Keefe. "Even the Hatfields and the McCoys made up. Why not those collegians, especially at a time like this?"

College Stars Meet Oshkosh

Cage Pros Seek Revenge For Beating Last Year.

CHICAGO—(INS)—Seeking their third victory in the third annual pre-season basketball classic, the College All-Stars take to the Chicago stadium court tonight against the Oshkosh Stars, professional champions.

Proceeds of the game, which is expected to draw 18,000 fans, will be contributed to the Chicago Service Men's Center.

Coach Don Darling's professional quintet will be seeking redress for its 35 to 33 defeat by the All-Stars last year and will start with a team including three former collegiate greats, Eddie Riska of Notre Dame, Gene Englund of Wisconsin and Ralph Vaughan of the University of Southern California.

The All-Stars, under the tutelage of Arthur Lonborg who coached the collegians in the victories over the Globe Trotters two seasons ago and Oshkosh last year, will send into action a varied lineup recruited from all sections of the country.

Pacing the All-Stars' attack will be Andy Zimmer of Indiana and Kirk Gebert of Washington State at the forwards and Bob Kinney of Rice Institute at center. Don Smith of Minnesota and Bob Davies of Seton Hall will be at the guards for the All-Stars.

These collegians will be backed by Rudy Baric of West Virginia who has been named co-captain with Zimmer, Mickey Rottner of Loyola, Vic Wukovits of Illinois, Price Brookfield of West Texas State Teachers and Stutz Modzelewski of Rhode Island.

In a preliminary game Camp Grant will meet the Ft Wayne professional five, member of the National Basketball league.

Bivins Makes Garden Debut

Clevelander Meets Lee Savold in 10-Rounder.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Jimmy Bivins, the Cleveland scrapper whose change-of pace punching has made him a favorite to become civilian or "interim" heavyweight champion, makes his eastern debut at Madison Square Garden tonight.

In this 10 round debut, the long-armed negro is a 13-5 choice to beat blond Lee Savold of Paterson, N. J., although Savold will have an advantage of about 17 pounds on the scales and nearly twice as much professional batting.

Bivins, scarcely more than a light heavyweight at 176 pounds, is favored because of his reach of 76 inches and the long range dynamite in his firsts.

Bivins has had a sensational year in which he licked such stalwarts as Bob Pastor, Tami Mauriello, Billy Soose and Gus Lesnevich. Of seven bouts in '42, he lost but one his first encounter with Pastor, a result that he reversed at Cleveland, Oct. 8 in his last ring appearance.

Tonight's winner will tackle on Jan. 8 the victor of a 10-round brawl on Dec. 11 between young Mauriello and Lou Nova of California in an elimination to determine a civilian title successor to Sgt. Joe Louis whose crown is "frozen" while in service.

Now It's Kammer's Turn to Explain Massillon System

By BEN BASSETT

MASSILLON—(AP)—One last, mighty cheer echoed across Massillon stadium, and nearly 20,000 jubilant fans started heading down the hills of this steel-making city.

Massillon high school's Tigers had just played their 50th consecutive football game without a defeat.

"There's no secret to it," said Coach Elwood Kammer. "Just hard work."

But there is a real system behind this team that has lost only one game since the start of its 1935 season. That system starts training the boys in the seventh grade, so that the high school regulars have five or six years of co-ordinated experience behind them. The coaches at Massillon's three junior high schools work hand-in-hand with the Senior high boss.

"We want those junior high fellows to win, but we want them first of all to teach the boys the fundamentals of blocking and tackling," Kammer explains. "We don't take a boy on our squad unless the junior high coaches recommend him."

That system, along with thorough scouting and the fact that Massillon would rather see football than eat pumpkin pie, helps explain the remarkable string of victories—and why the Massillon Tigers are the biggest gate attraction in Ohio, outside of Ohio State university, outdrawing many of the nation's leading college teams.

"These really are ordinary players but they like to play," says Kammer, running his appraising eyes over the squad. "We try to get the work out of them without making it drudgery. We pick the better type of kid a real guy who has self-respect but isn't cocky. And we don't raise hell with them."

Kammer is carrying on in the footsteps of Paul Brown, now coach at Ohio State. Brown coached the Tigers from 1932 to 1940, turning out such players as Ed Molinski, the Tennessee All-American.

Brown's personality and his Massillon record of 80 victories, two ties and eight defeats were among the factors which led Ohio State, fourth largest school in the U. S., to shatter precedent in hiring a high school coach.

Both Kammer and Brown played on Massillon high school teams - Kammer was co-captain in 1925 and later came up through the junior high school "farms." In the last two years he coached at Lorin Andrews junior high, his teams lost only one game.

"We aren't thinking in terms of 50 games without a defeat," he asserts. "After all, most of these kids have contributed to only a few of those victories. And we seriously believe that any team can beat us unless we take the game seriously. A little mud, or loose ball handling, and anything can happen.

"We run the boys a lot. We have no contact all week—all they get is the charging machine. None of the first team has had any scrimmage since spring.

"Four of our boys were hurt last spring, and they're getting over it. We put our first 10 kickoffs out of bounds this year. They never run 'em back on you when you do that, and we're trying not to get these boys hurt any more. Just now we're practicing kicking 10 minutes a night so that maybe, before the year ends, we can make the kickoffs count.

"We do know every move our opponents are going to make. We try to have a scout for every man on the opposing teams This year we haven't been able to do that, but it still takes up two to five hours to write a scouting report.

"The average age of the regulars is 17 and they'll weigh an average of 166. They are ordinary students –practically all of them get 'C' grades. But before spring practice they get an intelligence test that shows whether they have mechanical ability, and the ability to learn."

To that L. J. Smith, superintendent of schools, adds:

"There's absolutely no presure put on teachers to give passing grades to football players. Paul Brown set the pace on that — Brownie didn't want boys unless they could think. In 1940 and '41 the scholastic average of the football players was higher than that of the other pupils.

"Maybe there was some proselyting here years ago, but there isn't now. Boys who move to Massillon generally can't make the team, because they haven't been through our junior high school system.

"We can't afford to be caught on eligibility."

Massillon can't afford it because football meets interest and principal obligations on the floodlighted stadium built in 1939 with PWA aid, and supports dozens of school activities that run up deficits. Back in 1929 football income here was $3,338. Since 1938 it has run from $50,000 to $70,000 a year.

The population is only 30,000 and the school has 1,500 pupils. In a crowd of 18,500, Smith estimates, around 10,000 drive in from out of town.

"We use 75 people in our parking lots," Smith says. "That's part of our success. There are sometimes 5,000 cars, and we don't want any tires stolen. Why, we have men and women 80 years old lining up buy $1.10 reserved seat tickets."

The team attracts as many as 175,000 persons to 10 games a year —it would draw more if schools it visits had larger stadiums. Massillon plays no small-town pushovers In addition to outstanding football the crowd sees an extraordinary school band, versed in intricate patriotic maneuvers that stir the crowd at intermissions.

"I think the spirit radiating from the team and band has without question raised the scholastic standing of our high school," the school superintendent says.

Recently a students' organization began selling war stamps, in $1 packets, at Massillon's home games. Only girls with brothers or fathers in the armed services were eligible as salesmen, and that made one girl hesitant in applying.

"I haven't anyone in the service now," she said. "I did have a brother, but he was killed. Would I be eligible to sell?"

Smith dispelled her doubts and told the crowd about her, at a game. That night the crowd bought $7,000 worth of stamps.

Line Up Teams In Bowl Tilts

Records Scanned For Post Season Classics.

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

NEW YORK—(AP)—Athletic directors and football coaches, whose players have received all the bumps and bruises while building glittering records, will get the pushing and shoving themselves this week as bowl promoters seek Jan. 1 combatants.

Only on the campus of Texas university will everything be serene. The Longhorn players voted to compete in the Cotton bowl yesterday after polishing off Texas A. & M., 12 to 6, on a touchdown by Jackie Fields just 46 seconds before the game's end.

But at Tulsa university the athletes hurried right out after their 40 to 7 victory over Arkansas—their tenth without a tie or defeat—to post markers which would direct the mailman, telegraph messenger or personal bowl emissary to the home of Coach Henry Frnka.

They were hopeful of staging a bowl promoters' convention at William & Mary college, too, the Indians downing Richmond yesterday, 10 to 0, to replace Duke as the Southern conference champion.

Of course, much of the actual bowl business must be delayed until after Saturday's game in which unbeaten Georgia Tech has an important engagement with Georgia and Boston College mixes with a Holy Cross eleven that doesn't believe the Eagles have been voted the best team in the country.

That doesn't include Saturday's meeting between Army and Navy which annually would fill the largest bowl but this year has been cut down to finger-bowl size by president's orders.

Texas' faculty still must approve the school's participation in the Dallas bowl.

No announcement was made of a possible Longhorn opponent although Missouri, which yesterday trimmed Kansas, 42 to 13, to retain the Big Six title, Tennessee, Alabama and possibly Georgia have been mentioned.

One of the latter trio also might furnish opposition for Boston College in the Sugar Bowl.

Tulsa is another Sugar Bowl possibility and along with William & Mary and Penn State also has received unofficial consideration for the Miami Orange Bowl affair.

Georgia Tech, if it downs Georgia, is supposed to have the inside track to the Rose Bowl. However, if Washington State downs Washington Saturday it will take a lot of blocking and tackling to remove the Cougars from the front rank.

Barons Beaten by Hershey Bears

PITTSBURGH—(U.P.)—The Pittsburgh Hornets rallied for three goals in the final period to whip the Washington Lions, 5-2, and climb into a tie for second place in the Western division of the American Hockey league last night.

The Hershey Bears, Eastern division front-runners, maintained their three-point edge over runner-up Providence by scoring in every period to trounce Cleveland, 4-1, while the Reds tripped Buffalo, 5-3.

Johnny Sorrell scored a goal in the first period for Hershey, Wally Kilrea added one in the second and then Harry Frost and Roger Jenkins each clicked for a final-period score.

WIN THIRD TITLE

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—George Munger's power-packed University of Pennsylvania team tacked up the mythical Ivy league pennant for the third consecutive year today following its smashing 34 to 7 triumph over Cornell's luckless Big Red squad.

GRID TROPHY HONORS TWO ARMY HEROES

COLUMBUS, Ga—(AP)—A memorial trophy, honoring two former football players killed in action with American forces, will be awarded the winner of the Georgia Tech-Georgia football game at Athens, Ga., Saturday.

The trophy pays tribute to Tommy Witt of Georgia, who died in action in Egypt, and Bobby Beers of Tech, who was killed "somewhere over England."

A history of the two, who were attached to the airforces, will be engraved on the trophy.

Laubie Scares Cincy Bearcats

Shelby Star Scores Twice For Miami.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— If Miami Redskins could have given Bob Laubie, their freshman fullback from Shelby, a little help they might have pulled the Ohio football upset of the year yesterday.

Laubie scored two touchdowns to keep Miami in its Thanksgiving day ball game with Cincinnati until the Bearcats pulled into a safe lead in the final period to win 21 to 12. Cincinnati thereby annexed the all-state collegiate football leadership.

Five games completed the Ohio football season except for Saturday's contest between the Iowa Seahawks and Ohio State, which doesn't figure in the state standings.

Western Reserve, bounding back from its upset at the hands of Ohio Wesleyan, trounced Case 25 to 0 to win the greater Cleveland Big Four championship.

Dayton's Flyers, with losses only to Tennessee and Cincinnati, shut out Ohio university, 20 to 0.

Akron and John Carroll battled to a scoreless tie, but it was a moral victory for the hapless Zippers who haven't won a game.

Wilberforce lost to West Virginia State college on a neutral field at Detroit, 12 to 0.

Ohio Northern held the 1942 championship of the Ohio conference, which ended its season last Saturday.

Isbell, Baugh Tie for Lead

Packer Passer Still Has Chance For Title.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Cecil Isbell, the Green Bay passing expert, may beat out Washington's Sammy Baugh yet in their duel for passing honors in the national football league.

Isbell, 1941 champion, fell behind last week, but today's figures showed he had bounced back and was tied with Baugh for the leadership. Isbell led in the number of completions (125 to Baugh's 118), but the situation was reversed in percentage of completions with Baugh leading with .573 and Isbell next with .551.

Isbell, however, still has two games to play and Baugh only one. Isbell also has the better of his rival in yards gained by passing (1711 to 1396) and in touchdown passes, (20 to 14.)

* * *

Don Hutson, Isbell's favorite receiver, last week ran his catches for the season to 71, 13 more than the record he held jointly with Don Looney of Pittsburgh.

Merlyn Condit of Brooklyn whittled away at Bill Dudley's lead in the ball carrying race, but the Pittsburgh back still held a 52 yard advantage.

Seahawks Give Ohio Big Test

Bierman Brings His Giants To Columbus.

By JOHN COLBURN

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Again bobs up that perennial question: can a good college team of comparative youngsters beat an outstanding all-star squad of seasoned veterans?

Ohio State, newly crowned Western conference champion, and the Iowa Seahawks, who have lost to only one college eleven (Notre Dame 28-0), will provide the answer tomorrow before about 40,000 fans in Ohio stadium.

The Ohio gridders were confident that their speed and newly found passing attack gave them a chance against the former collegiate and professional stars coached by Lt. Col. Bernie Bierman, erstwhile mentor of powerful Minnesota teams.

Colonel Bierman's first two squads are composed entirely of officers at the navy pre-flight school. They range in age from 21 to 30 and only nine of the 29 squad members are under six feet. Their line will average better than 215 pounds.

The Ohio "kids", as Coach Paul Brown calls his boys, will be outweighed 20 to 25 pounds on the line. Only three of the Buck starters are over six feet.

In the backfield, the two teams stack up about even. Ohio's big triple-threat star, Paul Sarringhaus of Hamilton, will be in shape to oppose the Seahawks despite a broken nose suffered in the Michigan game. He will wear a special headgear.

The Ohio lineup will be the same that faced Michigan, but sub halfback Tommy James of Massillon, an alternate for Sarringhaus, may see some action. He was injured against Illinois but his lame shoulder has responded to treatment rapidly.

* * *

Ohio State planned a routine limbering up drill today, but the Seahawks won't reach town in time for a practice.

HIGHER PRICES PREDOMINATING ON STOCK MART

Bank Clearings For Week of Nov. 19 Exceed Similar Period Last Year.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Fractionally higher prices predominated in today's early stock market proceedings.

Improved at a quiet opening were American Airlines, Chrysler, Republic Steel, Standard Oil (NJ) and North American. A shade lower were Bethlehem and Chesapeake & Ohio

Trend searchers noted the estimate that bank clearings in 23 cities for the week ended Wednesday exceeded the comparable period last year, which contained only five business days in many states, by 12.9 per cent but were 14 per cent under the near-record figure of the preceding 1942 week.

Attention was given the Dun & Bradstreet survey which said that retail spending throughout the country this week moved slightly forward to a new peak for fall business despite unseasonably mild weather in many sections.

what abated," the official communique said but the aerial warfare increased in tempo.

American fighter planes and bombers shot six Jap fighters out of the air yesterday. The Allies lost three of their own craft—the heaviest loss yet suffered in a single day by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen in the battle for Buna.

Much of the Allied air force based nearby was hurled into the fray, with low-flying A-20-A's B-25's and B-26's and Beaufighters ranging against the foe The majority of the attacks were directed against Jap ground forces well entrenched in foxholes and hidden in trees

Allied heavy bombers ranged farther to the west to smash hard at the airdrome at the northern Jap base of Lae Direct hits were scored on the objectives, the communique said.

WAR BRINGS BACK COMMUNITY SINGING IN OHIO'S CITIES

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Clevelanders are tuning up that old piano, clearing their throats—and singing these days. Yes sir looks like community singing and barbership warbling is here for the duration. By the way, the singing isn't taking place in the old barbershop any more—No, it's coming from the home fireplace—Friends and neighbors are gathering around the old piano and blending their voices to old and new tunes—such as "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition," "Kalamazoo," "White Christmas," and some old numbers "Beautiful Katy," "In the Evening by the Moonlight," "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," "Pack Up Your Troubles" and other ditties of the past war and earlier eras.

Verifying this news of the return of community singing is Dr. Russell V. Morgan, director of music in the public schools. Dr. Morgan says everyday he receives requests for song sheets from home groups.

Although there aren't as many tenors as before the war there are plenty of sopranos, altos, baritones and bases.

Dr. Morgan reports that there is a big increase of interest in obtaining entertainment for school, social and other groups around town. Many wish to give parties to raise funds to purchase war bonds and for other patriotic causes. To help take care of the growing demand all over town for such entertainment, Dr. Morgan heads a large music committee, an adjunct of the Cuyahoga county council of civic defense, of which W. A. Stinchcomb is chairman.

Plans were made at a recent meeting to provide an entertainment corps of song leaders and accompanists who can go about the city and take care of present demands for community singing.

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Two stories of another generation have been added to the Mansfield Public library collection for older boys and girls. One takes place in the mines of southern Illinois. The other is a story of pioneering in Florida.

OWEN OF THE BLUEBIRD, by Florance Walton Taylor—Owen Pryce and his mother came from Wales in 1895. Owen had helped his father at salmon fishing but when Mr. Pryce died Owen's uncle promised to help him find work in America. Working in a coal mine as a trapper and a mule driver was quite different from fishing but Owen knew he wouldn't do it long. He studied surveying and soon was ready for a better job.

HETTY'S ORANGE WINTER by Marjorie Medary — Her first trip on a boat took Hetty to Florida where she joined her uncle's family. They were pioneers in the planting of orange trees. The two boys in the family, including the orphan who had been found on the way to Florida, made a lively year for Hetty. The story took place in 1880.

FRENCH SCUTTLE PART OF FLEET; FOE IN TOULON

Nazis Meet Resistance as They Seize Big Naval Base on Mediterranean.

French formations is going on and will be finished in a short time," the high command said.

The high command noted that Toulon had been left unoccupied by German troops which moved into the previously unoccupied zone of France two weeks ago. This action, said the communique, was due to the pledge of the French to defend themselves against any Allied move.

However, the high command charged the French naval commanders "broke their word of honor to form a combined defense."

"Attempts of high French officers to flee increased," the communique said. "Also systematic agitation under Anglo-Saxon influence started to spread among the French defense force which had been ready to cooperate and this agitation in recent days also infiltrated the navy at Toulon."

The high command said that the split among the French officers "increasingly was jeopardizing the security of German-Italian troops of occupation and undermined the authority of the French state leadership."

"The fuehrer and the duce gave orders last night to occupy the fortress," said the communique. "German and Italian troops carried out this order with lightning speed."

The DNB German news agency reported that Hitler had sent Marshal Henri Philippe Petain a letter outlining the reasons for the Toulon occupation and commenting on Franco-German collaboration.

The letter charged that "unfortunately the unscrupulous Anglo-Saxons and, last but not least, the Jewish wire pullers succeeded in interpreting every friendly gesture of the new reich as a sign of German weakness and every offer of peace as a proof of imminent collapse."

The high command announcement said the occupation of Toulon was undertaken:

"To prevent the French Mediterranean fleet from its planned departure and to demobilize an insecure contingent of the French defense force."

The Nazi action was in direct contradiction to the action of Hitler at the time the Germans occupied the previously unoccupied area of France two weeks ago.

At that time the Germans asserted that Hitler had ordered his troops to refrain from occupying Toulon because of assurances by French naval commanders that they would defend their ships against any attack.

It appeared that the Nazis had grown increasingly jittery concerning the possible response of the French command to appeals by the Allies and by Admiral Jean Francois Darlan to go over to the Allied side.

Whether the Germans would now attempt to bring the French warships actively into the Mediterranean battle was not yet certain. It seemed highly doubtful, however, that they could persuade French officers and seamen to fight their ships in the Nazi behalf and it was equally doubtful that the Germans could provide naval personnel of their own at any early date to man the ships.

Base, 62 Ships Prize That Hitler Sought

(By Associated Press)

The prize Hitler was after in occupying Toulon was the most important French naval base on the Mediterranean and 62 units of the French fleet, including three capital ships, believed to be there.

Admiral Darlan, who has aligned himself with the Allies, had broadcast appeals for the French warships to steam for Allied bases; the Petain regime has made counter-efforts to keep them from doing so.

These men-o'war, whose possessions by either side could, on paper, tip the balance of naval power in the Mediterranean either way, include the battleships, Strasbourg, Provence and Dunkerque.

Other units include cruisers, destroyers, submarines and auxilaries.

Toulon itself is of tremendous importance, lying as it does less than 450 miles across the Mediterranean from Allied-occupied Algeria. In Nazi hands this base could be of great aid to Hitler in meeting an Allied invasion from across North Africa.

The Toulon coast is particularly rugged and forbidding; the harbor is surrounded by high elevations, bristling with great shore batteries. Deep water in several ship basins run five miles inland.

From its sprawling yards have been launched some of the finest battelships in the French navy. Its shops made it the pre-war repair center of the French fleet.

ARMY GROWS

Spain Calls More Men to Colors; Goal of 750,000 Seen.

MADRID —(AP)— Spain's army strength was rising toward 750,000 today as members of the classes of 1938, '39, '40 and '41 reported under orders putting into effect the partial mobilization which Generalissimo Francisco Franco authorized shortly after the Allies moved into French North Africa.

The best estimates are that the new men will increase by 50 per cent the numbers of the present army of 500,000.

Remodeled Store Opens Doors

Formal opening today of the remodeled B. F. Goodrich Silvertown store at East Fourth and North Diamond streets is attracting many regular customers and prospective new patrons, according to J. J. Sheehy, store manager. Alterations have permitted expansion of a diversified line of merchandise. Tires and tubes, subject to rationing regulations are available to motorists. Modern lighting arrangements add not only to the attractiveness of the showrooms but to the ease of the patron. Added are displays of dishes and housewares, an extensive line of paints, enamels and paiting supplies, luggage sports goods, sports equipment and at present a Christmas Toyland is attracting attention.

Mansfield to Go 'All Out' On Pearl Harbor Anniversary

sure to turn in your pledge."

The pledge is a form to be distributed Sunday evening Dec. 6 to all homes in the city, as the Mansfield civilian defense organization stages its first test molibization. These pledges are being prepared by the bond sale committee, and one of the chief reasons for filling them out will be to help tabulate the number of persons who made bond purchases.

There's another reason—an important one—that will be announced as soon as all arrangements are completed. It will be a reason of sufficient importance to make you want to buy and buy and buy bonds. And the filled-out pledge card is a vital part of this plan.

There is also another—and important—phase of the "Remember Pearl Harbor—Buy Bonds" drive. That is the campaign that is being conducted among Mansfield and Richland county industries to obtain participation in the payroll deduction plan for buying bonds. That campaign is already under way, and results will be announced next week. The goal is high—the committee wants every industrial plant in Richland county signed up under the "10 per cent" plan.

Bonds will be available at the four Mansfield banks—Citizens National Bank and Trust company, the Mansfield Savings Trust National bank, the Farmers Savings and Trust company, and the Richland Trust company; the Mansfield postoffice; the Mechanics Building and Loan company, the Ohio and Madison theaters, and the Ohio Fuel Gas company office, Park avenue west.

Heading the committee are James Eberly, president of the Junior Association of Commerce, and Roger Bolin, advertising manager of Westinghouse, as co-chairmen. Other members are P. M. Eliot, county war bond committee chairman; Lowell Moore of the J. A. C., Gilmore Hiett, Robert Horn, Paul W. Endriss, Grattan Johnston, J. M. Barnett, K. A. Donelson, Clarence Fike, head of the American Federation of Labor in Richland county; John Gross, president of the Richland county CIO council; John Routzon, Floyd Dent, V. H. Lodde, Art Lindley and C. O. Lister, commander of McVey post, American Legion.

So "Remember Pearl Harbor—Buy Bonds" is the slogan, and Dec. 7 is the day, with preliminary activities starting the night before, with the test mobilization.

60 LEAVE FOR ARMY CENTER

Mansfield Reservists Depart In 2 Buses; Get Orders on High School Boys.

for a 10-day furlough before they begin training.

Richland county selective service board today had received instructions for the induction of registrants in the 18-20 age group who are still in high school.

Pupils past 18 who are called for induction during the final half of the school year will be permitted to finish the year if they file a request for deferment with their boards.

The law makes no provision for deferment of pupils called during the first half of the school year, which in Mansfield ends Jan. 29.

Clerks emphasized that pupils who are called must request deferment and show that they are in the final half of the school year. It makes no difference whether they are freshmen or seniors.

In Mansfield where several boys who have just reached 18 will be graduated at the end of the first semester at Senior high school, board clerks indicated they would permit registrants to get their diplomas before they are called for induction.

It is expected that the boys 18 and 19 years old will be called during January and February, delaying the induction of men who were married before the draft law was enacted.

LONDON—(AP)—Reuters said it had recorded a Moscow broadcast—which did not indicate the source and which was without confirmation from any other quarter—reporting that Benito Mussolini personally had assumed command of Italian forces in Libya, replacing General Ettore Bastico.

Bastico was appointed supreme commander of Fascist forces in Libya in Nov. 1941.

Salesman Released on $1,000 Bail on Firearms Charge.

Robert M. Allen, advertising salesman for radio station WMAN, it at liberty under a $1,000 surety bond awaiting action by the county grand jury on a charge of "pointing and discharging firearms" growing out of a shooting sortie at his home in the Zediker apartments, early Tuesday.

Police Captain Paul Whipp and Patrolman Richard Hecht braved his threats to shoot when they broke in the apartment door after he had fired a bullet through the door leading to a bathroom where his estranged wife, Jeanette, had taken refuge.

Allen pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Acting Municipal Judge Herbert H. Schettler Wednesday. The bond, furnished by the Continental Casualty company, was filed late Wednesday, releasing Allen from county jail.

AXIS PINCHED ON TWO FRONTS AS REDS ATTACK

Soviet Northern Offensive Strikes to Within 100 Miles of Latvia.

miles southwest of Tunis.

If successful, the effect of these synchronized thrusts would be to split the Axis forces in Bizerte and Tunis and also cut off the route of Axis escape southeastward to Libya.

United Nations headquarters in North Africa said Allied troops were now "advancing successfully" northeastward—in the direction of Tunis and the Gulf of Gabes coast—after capturing Mejez El Bab over stiff resistance.

A German broadcast reporting that the Allies had surged forward within 15 miles of Tunis indicated that they had advanced 15 miles through the 30-mile-deep perimeter of Axis defenses guarding the Bizerte-Tunis sector along the northeast coast.

On the flaming Stalingrad front, chaotic fighting raged across the lifelines of Hitler's imperilled siege armies and latest reports indicated that the fast-wheeling Red armies were driving back from the west to strike at the invaders' rear after tightening the noose after cutting off all but a 20-mile-wide avenue of escape.

Official Soviet dispatches said Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's eight-day-old offensive had rolled up a tally of 115,600 Axis troops killed or captured and possibly 150,000 others were wounded—a grand total of 265,000 knocked out of action.

Russian reports said the Red armies had already severed many, if not a large majority, of all roads of supply and escape and were pinning the estimated 300,000 survivors of the Axis siege armies into a 45-mile-wide strip between the Don and the Volga.

Front-line dispatches said that battle swirling across the frozen steppes was so confused it was impossible to define the lines clearly, but reported that in some places the Russian offensive had gained such momentum the fleeing Germans were overwhelmed before they could burn planes on airfields.

The extent of the German rout was highlighted by a Soviet communique reporting the capture of 1,863 guns, 3,851 machineguns, 50,000 rifles, 1,320 tanks, 9,000 horses and 108 supply dumps.

The battle for Tunisia was developing speedily. London quarters estimated the Axis now had 20,000 German and Italian troops in the French colony.

A Nazi broadcast asserted that the German air force had won air superiority over Tunisia "with lightning speed," but offered no supporting evidence.

The Germans' vaunted "superiority," however, did not prevent U. S. army planes from inflicting new havoc on the Nazi-held airdrome at Tunis, where 10 enemy planes were caught on the field and heavily bombed.

"No fighter opposition was encountered," Allied headquarters said.

British Slow Down Libyan Advance

CAIRO —(U.P.)— Britain's drive through Libya has slowed as the eighth army approaches El Agheila on the Gulf of Sirte 475 miles from Tunisia, it was indicated today.

A communique of the middle eastern command, announcing bombing raids on the big Axis air field near El Agheila and on the Tunis docks, said there was nothing to report from the land forces.

It had been expected that the British advance would be slowed as it neared El Agheila, to determine whether the German Afrika korps would try to make a stand on that natural defense line or continue its retreat into western Libya.

Swiss Alarms Hint New Raids By RAF

LONDON —(U.P.)— Air raid alarms sohnded in Swiss cities during the night caused widespread belief that the Royal Air Force had raided Italy or southwestern Germany but the air ministry gave no report of offensive operations.

In daylight operations yesterday British planes bombed freight trains, tugs and barges in northern France and Holland. Two British planes were lost in the operations.

TALK SPENDING MONEY RATIONS

Treasury Officials Also Weigh Drastic Forced Savings Program.

hausted his free coupons he could obtain more by paying a tax on them. The rate of that tax would be sharply graduated to the prohibitive level, so that after say $5,000 or $10,000 of spending it could take $2 to buy $1 worth of consumer goods for services.

No one could buy food, clothing, or other consumer goods or services without rationing coupons covering the amount of purchase.

No ration coupons would be required for war bonds, insurance premiums or other types of savings.

The planners have arrived at $25,000,000,000 —not $16,000,000,000 as has been reported — as the amount of surplus purchasing power that should be absorbed by the government from the people by subtracting the new sharply depleted value of available consumer goods from estimated income less normal savings.

The treasury and the Byrnes' office of economic stabilization concede that it would be impossible to get congressional approval of a tax or forced savings program that would extract $50 out of each $100 of income in the brackets under $5,000, and more out of the higher brackets. It is doubtful that this amount will ever be seriously proposed to congress. But the administration can be expected to ask for as much of that amount in tax recommendations next year as it seems at all possible to get.

The goal of the present voluntary war bond campaign is $12,000,000,000. It is generally conceded that with the inauguration of forced savings those sales would drop about 100 per cent. To outpace the present program, forced savings would have to start with a sure $12,000,000,000 and go on from there.

It is estimated that without about 50 per cent taxation of the lowest bracket incomes the forced spending and tax load could be boosted to about $25,000,000,000.

The administration experts concede that such a program would uproot living standards in the middle brackets. But so will run away inflation.

RATIONS OR BREAKDOWN, JEFFERS SAYS

Warns Transportation System In U. S. Will Collapse Without Gas Limit.

president solely to do one job. There isn't anything in Washington I want. In fact, the only thing I do want is to complete this job and go back out west on the job to which I have devoted my life.

"To get this rubber job done, we must conserve to the limit and manufacture synthetic rubber as rapidly as possible. I am confident it can be done, I am confident the American people want it done, and I am perfectly willing to play my part in the program."

Jeffers outlined in detail the rubber tire requirements and the rate of stockpile consumption. He predicted that "if all goes well," important quantities of rubber should be available for civilian tire production in early 1944.

"If there is no hitch in the program, we should be able in 1944 to replace in a large measure the automobile tires now in use on the 27,000,000 passenger cars and 5,000,000 trucks operating in the United States," Jeffers said.

The crude rubber stock at the end of October was 465,232 tons while current consumption is at the rate of 29,000 tons a month. This, Jeffers pointed out, in the ten months ending next September would reduce the stockpile to about 200,000 tons, after allowing for possible importations of 25,000 tons. The Baruch report warned, Jeffers continued, that it would be unsafe to reduce the domestic rubber inventory below 120,000 tons at any time.

The report said further that a 100,000 ton reserve should be kept in the form of crude rubber to meet military requirements.

"I do not believe we should rely upon less than that when we are converting from the use of crude rubber to the use of various synthetics and substitutes and at a time of over-taxed transportation facilities, if there is any way to avoid it," Jeffers stated.

Production of synthetic rubber, he said, contains "a great many 'ifs!'" If synthetic plants are completed "in sequence and on the scheduled dates, the first will enter production in January and others will continue to come in until September, 1943," he declared. But he added:

"That, of course, is a gamble. It is contingent upon a constant flow of materials to this program . . . if these plants produce on the dates and in the quantities according to the engineering formulas, we will have something like 50,000 tons of synthetic rubber available and suitable for use before the middle of 1943," he testified.

Gas Ration to Cost Ohio $21,000,000

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The nationwide gasoline rationing program effective Dec. 1 will cost Ohio's state and local governments approximately $21,200,000 in 1943 gasoline tax recenues, authoritative estimates indicated today.

This represents a decline of about 37 per cent from gasoline income of $59,326,946 in 1941.

The highway department, therefore, faces a possible tax revenue loss next year of about $11,900,000, counties and townships $5,250,000, municipalities $4,000,000, and the general fund $5,500,000.

City, Nation Keep Wheels of Industry Turning on Holiday

President Roosevelt's proclamation giving thanks for "the greatest harvest in the history of our nation," was read in London by Ambassador Winant. In Australia the mess tables of U. S. troops held plenty of turkey.

On the home front, many war plant bulletin boards bore a greeting to workers from Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander-in-chief of the expeditionary forces in North Africa.

"On this Thanksgiving day," Eisenhower asserted, "Let us thank God for the American industry, labor and management, which has given us the weapons and the equipment with which to conduct our North African campaign. More power to you."

The president, high officials of the government and of the army and navy, participated in prayer and song service in the White House.

Thanksgiving services were held in three Mansfield churches, Grace Episcopal, First Lutheran and First Church of Christ, Scientist, after the church-going public had filled churches the night before for union services.

City, county and federal offices were closed along with banks and many other business establishments. No local fatalities marred the holiday and the weather, which at this date cannot be termed a military secret, was clear but cold and windy.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER
MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1942.

We ourselves must shape the future of our country. To do so unity and sacrifice are needed. To win the victory our entire people, like a single unit, must fight shoulder to shoulder under our commander-in-chief.—Cardinal Dougherty.

Example of Sectional Selfishness

SECTIONAL selfishness in an obnoxious but typical form is being evidenced in congress in connection with the gasoline rationing program scheduled to become effective next Tuesday.

A comprehensive investigation by the Baruch committee revealed urgent need to conserve the rubber in tires now in use and it has been convincingly demonstrated that the only way this can be successfully done is to impose a 35-mile speed limit and restrict motorists to essential driving—which makes gasoline rationing necessary.

This conclusion has been reached by what must be assumed to be the best authorities, who have been vested with power to act, and if it is to be selfishly actuated, congressmen and senators, rather than Rubber Administrator Jeffers, who are to have the final voice on this subject, regardless of consequences, the outlook for this nation's war effort is darker than it may seem to those who are placing self interest above general welfare.

Recommendation by a special house committee that there be a six months' postponement of gas rationing is absurd on the face of it. If there is actual need for rubber conservation that need is NOW, and if probable conditions in "six months from now" can be no better foreseen by congressmen than they were during the months preceding the Pearl Harbor attack, the matter of rationing gasoline had better be left to Mr. Jeffers, with whose decision President Roosevelt, as commander-in-chief of the nation's armed forces, expressed himself yesterday as being in full accord.

Congress performs a necessary function in government—but it was never intended that district or state interests dominate over the national interest in time of war. In gasoline rationing, and in other emergency measures that it may be necessary to adopt for the duration, it will be advisable for congress to keep "hands off."

Unpaid Workers Deserve Appreciation

ONE FEATURE of the nation-wide rationing program which should not be lost sight of, or go unappreciated, is the immense amount of work being done by ration board members, school teachers and other volunteers who are NOT BEING PAID for what they do.

Starting off with sugar registrations, followed by two sets of applications for extra canning sugar, and coming recently to registration of motorists for A cards and for extra gasoline allotted holders of B and C cards, the rationing task has been a gigantic one and all who participate in it as unpaid workers deserve commendation for their willingness to contribute their time and talent to what has, at times, been a disagreeable job.

With all the money being spent by the federal government for non-military purposes, and with the present costly set-up of a rent control program, an impression may be justified that an unfair advantage is being taken of the patriotic willingness of volunteer workers to carry through the rationing registrations and the War Bond sale campaigns without compensation—but willingness to work WITHOUT BEING PAID FOR IT sometimes tends to enlist the services of more capable persons than are ordinarily available for public positions which offer even a modest wage.

Possibly because the rationing program and the War Bond sales campaign are being successfully carried through with relatively small outlay of money, and because of the high caliber of personnel engaged in these activities, the thought is quite prevalent in Mansfield that all essential phases of rent control in this area could be as well handled by existing agencies and unpaid volunteer workers as through the expensive organization now being developed.

Pound of Coffee Is the Limit

HERE'S another quirk to the coffee rationing program that must be impressed upon the minds of all coffee users—lest they lay themselves open to a $10,000 fine, 10 years in prison—or both.

Persons who have more than one pound of coffee on hand are not eligible to use the No. 27 coupon in their ration book until their present supply is reduced below one pound, as presentation of the coupon is "tantamount to a declaration that the would-be purchaser has no more than one pound of roasted coffee at home."

Some responsibility is placed on the seller, also, as an OPA ruling says: "No person shall transfer roasted coffee to a consumer if he knows, or has reason to believe, the said consumer owns or possesses more than one pound of coffee for personal use."

But, somehow or other, the threat of $10,000 fine or ten years imprisonment doesn't sound convincing. There's a thought that if the penalty were $25 fine or ten days in the county jail many people would be more seriously impressed.

Be On Lookout for Broken Glass

BROKEN GLASS on streets and highways creates an even more serious hazard now than at times when ruined tires could be readily replaced and only monetary loss was suffered.

Carelessly dropped bottles are the common source of glass fragments on streets and the only safe practice is to see that these are gathered up immediately. Some people take the attitude that they are "not responsible" for broken glass near their own place of business or home premises, but the matter of responsibility has little to do with it when precious tires are endangered by sharp pieces of glass.

The day's "good deed" for Boy Scouts, as well as for other children and all adults, could be helpfully directed toward being on the lookout for broken glass on streets, sidewalks and highways, and placing it in a receptacle where it can do no harm.

Eight southern states charge $2 for the privilege of voting while elsewhere some voters seem to think they should be paid for the trouble of going to the polls.

Most of the experimenters with soybeans as a food are quite content to have them used for plastics.

Telephone Calls May Be Rationed

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — The present controversy between the Federal Communication Commission and the American Telephone and Telegraph company over long distance telephone charges illustrates the difference in government theory between this war and the last one.

In the last war the natural law of supply and demand was virtually allowed its own sweet way. When there was not enough sugar, the price soared to a level which finally went above twenty cents a pound. Eggs were scarce, perhaps due to the very hard winter of 1917-1918. In some localities, including Washington, D. C., the price of fresh eggs reached $1.20 a dozen—ten cents each!

We had meatless days, and heatless days and almost abolished Sunday driving (gasoline was higher priced then, too, though there was no tax on it. But that has nothing to do with this picture, since reduction in gas prices recently have been due to improvements in manufacture and fresh oil fields). But these were mere attempts to modify the situation, not to CONTROL it.

The point is that if left to itself, the law of supply and demand works. If a thing becomes too scarce, the price shoots up until it becomes such a real economy to do without it that everyone is looking for substitutes.

BUT in this war the government has attempted to obtain conservation of scarce articles without aid from the law of supply and demand. It attempts to force curtailed use by rationing.

Theoretically, this is much more democratic. It prevents the rich man or woman from enjoying things which have gone above the budget possibilities of their not so well heeled neighbors. But rationing OUGHT to be a lot better, because it is VERY expensive. It takes a lot of effort and material and man and woman hours to conduct rationing. It forces a lot of work on not only the customers but every dealer who handles the products involved. In view of the manpower shortage it places a severe strain on the whole economic situation.

Whereas the unfair but unswerving old law of supply and demand does all this for nothing!

Now comes the government and wants the telephone company to reduce long distance rates. Past history has shown that every time such rates are reduced the use of long distance calls shoots up. In fact it has become a standard joke that the best way for the telephone company to make bigger profits is to reduce its rates. The company did not always think so, but that has been what happened.

AT THE moment the telephone company is devoting almost all of its advertising, to inducing people NOT to make long distance calls unless they are vitally necessary. It cannot extend its facilities during the war because that would require materials too badly needed for the war effort. And it is doing its best to discourage unnecessary calls, which would yield it good revenue, in order to keep the lines clear for calls concerned with national defense.

Everyone knows that a very large percentage of long distance calls COULD be eliminated with little loss of efficiency or time. But to the average American settling some matter by a long distance call gives such a thrill of speedy accomplishment that the company is up against a tough assignment in its present crusade to cut down the number of calls. And now the government is going to make its job tougher—make it harder to keep the lines free—drive us to rationing of telephone use!

Listen World!

'Get on With It'

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I LIKE the British expression—"Get on with it!" I suspect those four words hold the deepest lesson America needs to learn.

There are many ways of doing a job. You can do it for the job's sake or for your country's sake or for the sake of your own self respect. But we Americans have another test—we want the job to be fun.

We want it as an outlet for our universal yet for excitement. We want it as an escape from the drudgery, monotony and loneliness of domestic chores. Of course we like the dramatic trimmings which go with any defense work nowdays—bands playings, throngs cheering, gilt braided officers handing out verbal orchids.

But there's nothing new about this attitude. Even before the war came, we wanted adventure above all else—something different, something thrilling. Something that would hop up the old blood stream. And if the job didn't provide it—whether it was marriage or a machine shop—most of us thought it was a flop. We've sold ourselves on this notion. It's a fetish with us—part of our free "machine age" life.

But the British have a different way of looking at work. It isn't as exciting. There's no juke box accompaniment. But, once convinced that a job is necessary, the British set their jaws and "get on with it."

It takes a lot of living and many a kick in the shin to develop that attitude. And it isn't surprising that we haven't achieved it yet as a whole. We're still too near our Indian fighting days—too near the vast abundance which gave us all our chance of fancy pickins. It hasn't been necessary for most of us to "get on with it." We could always quit our jobs and choose one more to our liking.

That doesn't mean we aren't brave. We are gloriously. We'll tackle every risk that heaves in sight! If there isn't a risk, we'll make one. Danger? It's our dish. But the dull days get us down. Just doing things—doing tiresome, dull duties because they must be done—that gives us a case of hives. We're allergic to monotony. And definitely.

And that's where the British have the edge over us. Personally, though I'm partly English myself, I have never regarded the English as a Glamour Group. (There's something about their calm complacency, their controlled efficiency, that gets beneath my hide. I want fireworks with mine. But that doesn't blind me to the fact that the English have given as grand a demonstration of quiet grit and loyalty during these war years as the world has ever seen. And my hat's off to them!

"GET ON WITH IT!" There's as fine a slogan as ever was made for human progress. And there isn't a top-flight human who hasn't followed it. For life, in the long run, has few parades, few juke box days. Most of the time we have to grit our jaws and plug along, whether we like it or not.

And no one knows this better than the folks who are waiting at home these days. It's tough on the Egyptian desert and on the Solomon Isles. It's a bitter shift on Iceland and the Aleutians. But the shift can be just as gripping in a little two room walk-up flat in New York, Chicago or San Francisco. And there's just one answer.

We'll have to grow up. We'll have to stop expecting to get a bang out of everything. We'll have to realize that peace, safety and lasting joy aren't achieved by spurts of enthusiasm or explosions of excitement. They're achieved by "getting on with it," though our feet drag and our bodies lag and we're fed up with everything.

FOR WHETHER WE LIKE IT OR NOT, WE'VE GOT TO WIN THIS WAR. WE'VE GOT TO FORGET THE THRILLS . . . AND SINK OUR TEETH AND HANG ON . . . AND ACCEPT A PROMISSORY NOTE FOR THE REWARD THAT WILL COME SOME DAY IF WE'VE GOT THE STUFF TO STICK IT OUT. THERE'S NO OTHER WAY FOR ANY OF US. SO—GET ON WITH IT, CHUM!

Interpreting the War News

Critical Stage of War Reached, Hitler Nearing Supreme Effort

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

DEVELOPMENTS in Russia and North Africa make it apparent that Adolf Hitler has reached the cross-road of the war and that his eventual fate is going to be decided by the action now in progress.

As President Roosevelt suggested, the turning point of the war has been reached. Hitler has lost his 1942 Russian campaign and from present indications will be lucky to extricate his armies from the Don-Volga bend without a disastrous defeat. The Russians also are threatening in the Moscow region, which further endangers the German position on the entire eastern front.

But it is in the Mediterranean that the issue will be decided. It is there that Hitler is centering his mightiest and perhaps final effort. He could withdraw from Russia and still have a chance to hold the European fortress.

The Allies, however, are almost literally hammering at his gates in the south. They have brought the war closer to Berlin and Hitler faces the prospect of having to fight on his home grounds.

For that reason, Hitler is depriving his armies in Russia of needed air support and concentrating his Luftwaffe in Sicily and Sardinia. From those bases, they are using Tunisian airdromes as advanced operational fields and are giving the British and American forces a stiff fight.

A LONDON informant suggests that since his is the showdown, Hitler may have demanded action from the Italian navy to help keep a sea route open to North Africa. He pointed out that with plane cover and ships, Hitler can take advantage of the bad weather and long hours of darkness at this time of year to make it difficult for the Allies to intercept Axis shipping.

The feeling in London is that a critical phase of the war is in progress and that the Allies will have to exert the maximum effort to succeed in the African campaign which started so auspiciously. London looks for a hard fight and perhaps a long one.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons of "the extremely tense and serious operations now proceeding in Tunisia." He warned that the situation is too critical to permit political discussion of relations with the French in Africa.

Air power seems destined to play a vital part in the African campaign. It is an arm which Hitler can get to Africa more easily than any other, and it is not beyond possibility that he may be able to over-match the Allies, at least temporarily.

According to Brig. Gen. H. S. Sewell, British commentator, the R. A. F. and the American army air force have been able to provide cover for the advance of the ground forces, but the Allies do not seem to have had time fully to develop either their fighter or their bomber strength.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Not since the fight over reorganization of the supreme court (and that covers a lot of territory) have the foundations of congress been so rocked as in the senate scrap on the poll tax bill.

Only by seeing it could you believe it. From the very outset, party lines broke down. Friends turned against friends of long standing. Traditional foes discovered that they were bedfellows. And from the first day of the ruckus, jangled nerves resulted in spirited verbal rows that left the public galleries and the Senate itself a little breathless with astonishment.

IMAGINE the ordinarily courteous, kindly, long haired Texan, Senator Connally, tossing such bitterisms at aged, lame-duck Senator Norris that even he (Senator Connally) seemed amazed at his own remarks and withdrew some of them from the record.

Imagine dyed-in-the wool Democrats, men who have followed the administration through many a fight without a public whimper, turning on Majority Leader Senator Barkley and threatening rebellion against his leadership.

Imagine Senator (The Man) Bilbo or any other senator, for that matter standing on his feet at the very time that news was rolling in from both hemispheres of titanic battles, threatening to tie the senate up for 30 days or more with a filibuster.

OBSERVERS here are bemoaning the fact that congress, fresh from the strafing it got for voting itself pensions and bickering over political issues, gasoline rationing cards, etc., has stuck out its neck again.

It undoubtedly has, but before you pass judgment, it might be well to consider one more thing: That there isn't a single parliamentary weapon used in the poll tax scrap that hasn't been used for a century and a half under that very same Capitol dome.

In other words, this is nothing new—not even in war time. The filibuster has been recognized as a parliamentary expediency for 150 years. Taking up all the senate's time with roll calls (raising the point of order that no quorum is present) isn't quite as old, but almost. Loading a bill down with extraneous and highly controversial amendments (the poll tax state senators threatened to tie more than 40 onto this bill) each of which would result in days of debate, also is an ancient trick.

All of these things have been done before—and even in the World war, the Civil war and others. It's just "Democracy at work"—a phrase that is a pretty good springboard to take off from when you are trying to form opinions on the antics of the legislative branch of our government.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

Why Call It Wednesday?

What's in a name, even a most prosaic one—like Wednesday, for example?

You would be surprised!

Wednesday originally was the Anglo-Saxon Wodnes daeg, Woden's day.

In other words Wednesday commemorates Woden, chief god of the Teutonic peoples, deity of war, agriculture, arts and culture.

By the Norse, Woden was called Odin, known as "All-Father," and credited with the invention of the mystic runic alphabet.

Our progenitors could do no less than name the fourth day of the week after him!

Blackout Signal

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Doubtless it was the lingering influence of the Chink and the Girl along the West India Dock Road, in Thomas Burke's "Limehouse Nights," but the first time I came to New York Broadway actually seemed sinister, and though the Street itself weltered in its customary blaze of lights, it was easy to imagine that each side street shadow concealed a shawled figure with a patch over one eye. I can tell you now that the cop on the corner was a very welcome sight.

Now, in the dimout, one often wonders what visitors think. The Great White Way is the gray way now. You can not see cars until they are on top of you. Only the other night I stood at 8th avenue in front of the New Yorker hotel and witnessed an accident that resulted in the death of a woman. She stepped right into the path of an automobile. She simply didn't see it, and before anyone could scream there was a grinding of brakes and she was a limp, crushed figure on the asphalt, dead.

THOUGH the lights have dimmed the crowds do not seem to mind. The sidewalks remain jampacked, not only with seamen and soldiers from the seven corners of the world but with New Yorkers and visitors, out to catch a moment's distraction.

The last time I saw Broadway (last night) I was walking south towards Penn station and contemplating, of all things, the flush of the light of the moon on the skyscrapers. How many years it has been since people walked Broadway and got romantic about the light of the moon is as good a guess for you as for me. It won't happen again after this, God Willing, for generations again.

I HADN'T gotten beyond Thirty-seventh street when the air-raid siren blew.

For me, all arguments of whether you can hear sirens in mid-town New York were settled. You couldn't have helped hearing them in the vaults of a bank.

I did what no good citizen does, and sprinted for the station, instead of taking immediate cover. If I had stopped right there I would have missed my train. Before I reached the station the street was miraculously clear of traffic, even though everyone seemed to agree by then that it was only a practice blackout, which it was.

The train was dimmed and one could not read a paper. So I stood in the vestibule and watched as mile after mile of darkened city rolled by. The only lights were in war production factories. The mystery in that bit of logic was only less marvelous than the absolute perfection of the sudden darkness imposed by the wail of a noise machine on the first city of the world.

A Farmer's Diary

Piano Tuner

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE GRAY-HEADED piano tuner who repaired our ancient instrument was not easily nonplussed. He ignored the battered case, the broken and missing keys, and said, "It's an excellent sounding board, still—and look at the heavy felt on those hammers. The newer models are lighter stuff. This is by a reputable maker. When I find good quality in an old instrument I take delight in doing the best I can with it, for it repays the efforts . . ."

"Where did you learn to tune pianos?" I inquired.

"It is my life work—music and musical instruments. It is a gift—I grew up to it. My grandfather came to this country from Wittenberg—he played a harp. As a little lad, I used to hear him tune it—it trained my ear. I yearned to try my own hand at tuning an instrument, but no child dared touch the big harp.

"Once, while I waited for my father in a market—I was nine or ten years old—I saw a nice solid box, and I wanted it. I asked the man what he would take for it, and he sold it to me for a nickel—nobody could buy a box for such a sum now. When my father came in, the store man said to him, 'Your little Fritz has bought that big box—don't say what for—you'd better keep an eye on that young one.'

"I took it home and a man who roomed with us helped me rip off the top and nail on two heavy planks. In those planks I bored holes and whittled pegs to fit snugly. I wanted wire, and there was none. I dared not ask my father for money—he would ask too many questions. I thought and thought about my experiment. One day my father and mother went away. My brothers and sisters went to school. I was supposed to go, too, but I made some excuse and remained behind, alone.

"My mother had three new brooms in the attic. I knew what I wanted to do, and eagerly took these brooms apart. The pieces, all but the wire, I hid under the woodshed. Then I began putting strings on my instrument. I was so absorbed that time flew. When school was out, and when my folks came home, I had more than two octaves, and could play a good tune. I hit the wires with a little mallet, padded with felt . . . a miniature xylophone. The family exclaimed at what I had done, and had me play for them. I was excited and very happy—that is, until my mother went to get her new brooms! My what a whipping I got!"

DEFTLY he replaced the "innards" in the old case, tuned and adjusted the wires, replaced a broken bass string . . . then he sat down, ran his hands over the keys and brought out the plaintive beautiful harmony of the "Minuet In G." Our little house overflowed with melody.

"Now," he said, "you can have music!"

CHAPTER XXVII

Another week passed. And now it was the beginning of the third week of "Honoria Lewis." His harsh direction of Livia was justified in the projection room.

"She's wonderful," agreed the top executives of the company as evening after evening they filled the small private projection room of boss Dunne.

"Yeah, but don't tell her," Fordyce commanded them. "I'm having a tough enough time as it is without her getting a swelled head."

Livia wanted to see the 'rushes' but Fordyce refused permission.

"Time enough to know how bad you are when the picture is released."

"Why are you so mean to me?"

"I haven't started yet." He grinned. "I'm going to get a good performance out of you if you hate me for the rest of your life." She suddenly realized why he was cruel, and she laughed.

"I'm an awful fool; I thought you didn't like me." He almost broke down then — but checked the impulse. Friendship and love could wait until the end of the picture—and that would not be for another nine weeks.

Four weeks passed . . . The picture was going so well that Fordyce felt it safe to soften his tactics. For two days he was the kind gentle person she had known before the picture. And then Livia's work suddenly deteriorated,

"What's the matter?" asked Dunne angrily in the projection room.

"What's the matter?" Fordyce asked Livia the next day. He reverted to his bullying methods stronger than before. But it made her worse. "What's the matter?" he yelled at her. She struggled for control. But it was no use. The violence of her weeping startled him.

Terry Davidson was in trouble. He owed money to nearly everyone in town. He always had owed money, but it had not bothered him much until now. His movie popularity, never very great, was doing one of the unpredictable Hollywood nosedives. Even his optimistic agent was discouraged.

"It may be some time before I can get you a job," said the agent.

Terry's one source of income now was the $50 Livia sent him weekly in the mistaken belief that Terry passed it on to her father. Until his film luck departed, Terry had paid the money on account to Al Jonas, or "the ape" as he was known affectionately in the exclusive underworld group of which he was boss.

Al was a petty racketeer. Anything from a dollar upwards was grist to his mill and his machinations spread through Los Angeles like the fine veins on a leaf. Gambling was the staple diet of his financial well-being.

No bets were too small or too big for Al Jonas. The stenographers in the studios and their bosses did track business with Al. Some of his business was honest. But much of it was not.

Terry Davidson had been a client of Al's ever since the Santa Anita track opened on Christmas day, 1935. He obeyed the command to come to Al's office in the night-club in Beverly.

Al's voice was friendly enough. But the small, bulging eyes were like ice.

"You haven't paid us anything for three months. How come?" he asked. Terry shifted uneasily on the carpet.

"Things haven't been so good with me lately, you know that."

"Things is bad for everybody," said Al pleasantly. And then like the firing of a gun, he ordered: "Empty your pockets!"

"What?"

"Is your hearing bad, too?"

Terry looked at the door longingly. But he knew there was no escape. He slowly brought out his wallet and surrendered it.

* * *

Al emptied the contents on his desk, and separated a dollar and a check from the few business and private cards. He looked at the check, smiled at the signature—"Livia Clarkson."

"What goes on here?" he asked Terry.

"Oh, I did something for her, and she paid me."

"What, for instance?"

"None of your business," Terry tried to sound injured. "I don't ask questions about your business, so lay off mine." Al laughed.

"She's Earl Dixon's kid, isn't she?" If they knew that, they probably knew the rest, Terry thought, but he bluffed a little longer.

"Who's Earl Dixon?" he asked. Al opened a door.

"Hey, Earl?" he shouted. Into the room staggered Livia's father. From the condition of his face and clothes he had neither been to bed nor undressed for quite some time. He peered hazily at Terry.

"D'ye mind if I sit down?" he said elaborately, and without waiting, bent stiffly into a chair "I'm thirsty—wanna drink," he announced.

Al took a bottle of Scotch from a cupboard, poured the brown liquid into a small glass. Dixon swallowed it and wiped his mouth.

"Ah, s'better. Who's this?" he pointed to Terry.

"D'ye know him?" Al asked Terry.

"Never saw him before in my life," he answered truthfully. Al grinned at Terry.

"So you were giving him $50 bucks a week from his loving daughter and for why? Because he was in Dutch with me, and his soft-hearted little daughter didn't want me to be nasty to her papa —me that wouldn't hurt a fly —unless it was trying to put something over on me. I'm surprised at you, Terry."

"Once I had a wife and a family—but no more, no more," said Dixon dramatically. He lurched up. "D'ye know who I am?" he asked Jonas, and without waiting for a reply, "I'm the best director in the business."

"Sure you are." Al patted his shoulder. Dixon moved away haughtily.

"Keep your hands off me." He sat down again, and his face was full of sadness, "Two little baby daughters, but no more. Got some more of that Scotch?"

"Sure." Al poured him another drink, "How'd you like to see your daughter?" Al asked him.

"Two little baby daughters," said Dixon. He peered craftily at Jonas, "Why?"

He walked unsteadily to the bottle on the desk and poured himself another drink.

"Good stuff, this," he smacked his lips, "My daughter's a movie star," he announced. "I saw her picture in the paper."

"Yes, I know," Al said. Was there anything he didn't know, Terry wondered?

"I made the best pictures in Hollywood," said Dixon belligerently, "Wanna make something of it?" he demanded.

"Yeah, but not the way you mean." Al laughed. "Look," he said to Terry, "I'm putting my friend Earl in your charge. See that he's happy."

"Where shall I put him?" Terry shrank away from Dixon.

"Here," said Al, giving Terry back the $50 check. He added five ten dollar bills, "Take him to your apartment—and keep him well supplied" he touched the bottle of Scotch.

"How about Livia Clarkson?" Terry asked at the door.

"Leave the thinking to me," Al replied gently.

That evening Livia was having her dinner in bed as usual.

"Who was that?" she asked Mrs. Sayles. She had heard the doorbell ring. Livia pushed the tray aside and went to the window.

"The ape man!" she exclaimed.

"He asked to see you. I said you had gone to bed, and he said to wake you up. I slammed the door shut in his face."

"Quick, get him and tell him to wait in the living-room."

Livia put on slacks and a sweater, and entered the living-room. Jonas was picking his front teeth with his thumb-nail and scrutinizing a photograph of her mother.

"Handsome woman," he said as Livia advanced toward him, "I'll introduce myself. I'm Al Jonas."

"Yes," she said briefly, "The bookmaker?"

"I didn't know I was so famous," he grinned and sprawled on the sofa.

"My hairdresser loses $10 a week to you regularly," Livia said crisply.

He spread his hands. "But think of the fun she has. Nothing like a good race for excitement"

"How much money does Earl Dixon still owe you?" Livia said abruptly.

"Nice place you have here—and in a good neighborhood."

"I've paid him about $500 now." Livia continued. "Terry Davidson said he owed you $3,000—so—"

"Terry's head for figures is bad. Your dad owes me $10,000, and $50-a-week payments is taking too long."

"But I can't afford any more," Livia said helplessly.

"That's no way for the daughter of a fine upstanding man to talk," said Al reproachfully. He brought out a pencil and paper from his pockets. "Let's see." He wrote some figures. "If you pay $200 a week, it will be all cleared up in three months."

"You think I'm as crazy as my father?"

"Oh, no That's why I'll expect your check for $200 next Thursday. You get paid Wednesday, don't you? And," he added at the door, "Make it payable to me. We don't need Mr. Davidson now."

"I shan't pay a cent."

He came back into the room.

"And," Livia continued angrily, "if you bother me again, I'll turn the whole thing over to the police."

"I have a friend on a downtown paper,' Al grinned. 'It would make a good story. 'Honoria Lewis, the daughter of Earl Dixon, famous ex-director, ex-jail bird '."

"But this is blackmail!"

"We don't say that word, lady." His grey eyes looked contemptuously beyond her, "I'll expect the check on Thursday?"

"Wait a minute," Livia begged. Her thoughts whirled helplessly. She wanted time to think. "I'd like to see my father"

It was all right with Al She could see him in his office any time she liked.

"Tomorrow evening?" she said. That was okay, too.

* * *

Somehow the day passed, and in the absorption of her role Livia tried to forget the coming ordeal. But it was hard to keep her mind on the picture.

When she left the studio, she drove to Jonas' office. A few men were sitting at the bar of the club, and they looked at her curiously.

"Where is Mr. Jonas?" she asked the bartender.

"Who wants him?" he asked. She hesitated.

"That's all right," said the voice of Jonas suddenly. He was framed in the doorway to the left of the bar. She had not heard the door open, and the deep voice startled her.

"Come right in," he invited, and Livia had the feeling that if she once went into the room she would never come out again.

Her father was sprawled on a worn, brown leather couch. She thought he was asleep, but his eyes suddenly opened and with difficulty encompassed her form. He smiled, and struggled to his feet.

"Livia! My daughter," he said to Jonas. "I'm afraid," he continued as Livia stared without speaking. "I'm afraid she does not approve of my habits. All right." He struck a noble gesture, "I'll never touch the stuff again."

He staggered to the table, took a long swallow from the bottle, slipped against the table and banged his head. Jonas caught him as he slid to the floor. One of the men at the bar came in.

"Get a couple of the boys and take him home," Jonas commanded.

"All right, I'll pay," Livia told Jonas.

"Sign here" He gave her a pen. She glanced over the typewritten document.

"How will I know you won't want more money?" she asked him.

"I give you my word."

"As a gentleman?" she said sarcastically.

CLEVELANDER FINDS PLEASURE IN MAPPING SOLDIER PARTIES

CLEVELAND (INS)—Chester J. Koch works like a Trojan at his job, has to take the criticism of many, but "when those boys walk down the station ramp on their way to army camps with a happy, courageous look on their faces, I know I've done my job well," he said.

That job is city co-ordinator of patriotic activity, and Koch works hard at it—morning and night—for he must not only see that the "boys" get a rousing send-off with blaring bands and plenty of flags displayed, but he also acts as a contact man between the military groups and various civic, sports and entertainment functions.

Koch sees to it that no soldier, sailor, marine or coastguardsman misses something he wants to see when he comes to Cleveland on a furlough or when he is stationed here for any reason.

He is a walking ticket agency and the "boys" get their tickets at no charge, for Koch sees to it that the agencies handling the ducats are well aware that those pasteboards they're handing out are helping to build a soldier or sailor's morale, while at the same time affording him an entertaining evening.

Recently people have been writing to Cleveland newspapers bemoaning the fact that reservists have to "put up" with so much fanfare and noise when they are leaving for camp.

One woman said "it must be embarrassing to the draftees."

"It's anything but embarrassing," Koch declared, "and if you could see the look on those boys' faces as they head for the train you'd know that the music and cheering has done something for them that sneaking away down some deserted street never could do.

"And there's going to be twice as much noise when they come back if I have anything to do with patriotic activities then," Koch said fiercely.

Koch said he receives from 25 to 50 telephone calls every day at his office thanking him for the good work he is doing in seeing that the reservists get a hearty send-off. The boys write back from the camps, thanking him, and parents write him letters expressing their appreciation.

"These send-offs bring families together and make them more conscious that a war is going on," he declared. "Of course, some people would be embarrassed at anything. I'm sure they're in the minority.

"I've seen the results when there is no music on the route to the station, and in the station. It's dull and drab, everyone is crying, and the boys go away with heavy hearts. And the families don't snap out of their heartaches afterward like they do when some good martial music is echoing through the station."
